Ship Tieup Ends as Men Accept New Pay Offer

Engineers Agree To Settle on Same Basis as Other Unions

BULLETIN

New York, June 19 (Thursday) (AP).—The end of the contract dispute that has tied up much of America's shipping since last Sunday midnight was announced early today by John W. Gibson, Assistant Secretary of Labor.

The basis of settlement was a 5 per cent wage increase for approximately 110,000 members of three maritime unions, Gibson said.

The settlement was reached when the Marine Engineers accepted the offer agreed to earlier by two other unions involved.

New York, June 18 .—A ship operators' spokesman who refused to be identified reported late tonight that operators have made a wage increase offer to the three unions involved in the CIO seamen's stoppage and that two of the unions considered it "satisfactory."

As hopes mounted that the "sit in" stoppage which has tied up hundreds of ships in United States ports since 12:01 a. m. Monday might be ended momentarily, the spokesman said that the operators' offer was patterned after one which earlier resulted in ending a dispute between the National Maritime Union and tanker companies. He gave no other details.

The offer was reported satisfactory to the NMU and the American Communications Association, but the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association was said by the spokesman to be holding out for more liberal contract terms. Union officials themselves did not comment immediately.

Agreeable to NMU

Joseph Curran, NMU president, had announced that the 5 per cent wage boost that settled the tanker dispute would be agreeable to his union.

Joseph Selly, president of the American Communications Association, another of the five unions involved in the dispute, said his group also was willing to use the same pact as a basis for settlement.

However, Frank J. Taylor, president of the American Merchant Marine Institute and chief spokesman for 39 East and Gulf Coast operators, declined immediate comment on the union's offer.

The union leaders made the statements at the offices of the U. S. Conciliation Service where they were conferring with Assistant Secretary of Labor John W. Gibson in a series of talks which Gibson hoped to climax with a joint bargaining session.

Referring to the tanker settlement, Curran said "there is no reason why this should not serve as the basis for agreement between the companies and the other unions. We are prepared to conclude on this basis today, to return the industry to normal."

Jack Lawrenson, an NMU vice president, said the tanker agree-

150,000 Shipbuilders Threaten Strike July 1

New York, June 18 (AP).—A Nation-wide strike of 150,000 workers in 51 shipyards was threatened today for July 1 by the CIO Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers.

The union policy committee voted by 100 to 3 to strike July 1 unless "bottom dollar" demands are met. The vote was taken after the policy committee heard the union negotiating committee report that shipyards were "out to break the union."

Greece Plans Wide Reforms Under U.S. Aid

Griswold Offered Great Powers to Carry Out Program

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Sweeping reform of the economic and administrative machinery of Greece was promised by the Greek government in an exchange of notes made public by the State Department yesterday.

In addition, the new American mission under former Gov. Dwight Griswold was invited to assume enormous powers to make sure that the promises are kept and the 300 million dollars of American help are effectively used.

The promises were intended as a formal assurance that Greece would put its house in order; the invitation asked Griswold virtually to take over the economic management of the country.

Diplomatic observers here could find few, if any, parallels in modern history for this announced willingness of one independent country to put its domestic affairs in the hands of another.

The Griswold mission was formally asked to "participate" in framing Greek fiscal policies, to approve any Greek expenditures involving American money, to take part in planning the Greek import program and to approve any Greek use of foreign exchange.

"The Greek government," said the note, dated June 15, "would also wish the mission to assist in execution of reconstruction projects, improvement of public administration, technical training of civil servants and other personnel, continuation of the health program, development of exports, programming and disposition of government-purchased supplies, promotino of agricultural and industrial recovery, and regulation of wages and prices.

"In general, the Greek government will wish to consult with the mission before taking any economic steps which might affect the success of the American aid program."

Among the many promises in the Greek government's list was "the composing of internal differences." This was interpreted here as a sign of Greek willingness to

Urges Universal Training

Soviet Has A-Bomb Formula, Father Walsh Tells House Unit

Russia now has the "formula" and "know-how" to make atomic bombs and will be able to wage atomic warfare within three or four years, Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University, said yesterday.

Father Walsh, world noted geopolitician and regent of the Georgetown Foreign Service School, made the statement while testifying in support of universal military training before the House Armed Services Committee.

Declaring that the Soviets got "complete knowledge" of how to make A-bombs from Canadian officials, later tried for treason, Father Walsh warned that "time is running out."

He said that Stalin "already has won two years time toward making the bomb." Seven thousand kidnaped German scientists are working on the project behind the Urals, Father Walsh said he was informed.

"That's why Gromyko is stalling on atomic control before the United Nations," he added.

The Catholic priest declared that Stalin is following the same pattern of aggression as did Hitler—except he's avoiding a shooting war. Most Americans, he added, cannot "see the crisis that is developing."

"I see great danger that we as a Nation will not awaken to the crisis until there is another Pearl Harbor," Father Walsh told the committee.

The Georgetown official, who served as a member of the President's advisory commission studying universal service, urged immediate congressional approval of such a step as part of a broad preparedness program.

Meanwhile, the Senate Armed Services Committee decided to go ahead with hearings on universal military training this session. First witnesses will be called next week, and the group hopes to have a report ready for the Senate before Congress adjourns next month, Chairman Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.) announced.

Planning Unit Seeks Causes Of Labor Peace

Point to Be Stressed Instead of Frequent Industrial Conflicts

The National Planning Association yesterday announced it was going to study the causes of industrial peace.

The association, comprised of leaders in business, labor and agriculture, indicated that an investigation of the reasons for good labor relations might be just as useful and productive as the study of labor conflict.

Besides, there's a lot more of the former than the latter, Clinton S. Golden, chairman of a 26-man technical committee directing the research, told a press conference yesterday.

The public may have an opposite impression, he said, because conflict is news and peace is not. Nevertheless, he pointed out, in 1946, when there were 5000 strikes, there were still 45,000 other management-union contracts which appeared to have been lived up to without too much difficulty.

Study on Case Work Basis

"In my opinion," he said, "the time has come when, instead of looking into the causes of conflict that we know and hear so much about, we ought to try to discover how much peace there is and what makes peace."

The study will be on a case work basis, taking 15 firms and the unions which deal with them as the subject. The firms will be chosen from the nominations made by some 5000 experts in the industrial relations field.

The investigators expect to find, among the diversity, some recurrent conditions which, they hope, can be shown as fundamental ingredients of good management-labor relations.

Personnel of Inquiry

Charles R. Walker, Yale University director of labor-management research, and Joseph Scanlon of the Industrial Relations Department at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, are codirectors of the NPA staff assigned to the study.

Members of the technical advisory committee include Eugene

Appeal to Soviet

Britain, France Seek 'Big 3' Conference on Marshall Plan

Paris, June 18 (U.P.).—Britain and France tonight issued an urgent appeal to Russia to join them in a Big Three ministers conference on putting into effect the plan of U. S. Secretary of State George C. Marshall for European recovery.

British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Foreign Minister Georges Bidault agreed to ask Russian Foreign Minister Viacheslav Molotov to meet them next week, at a place to be decided on later, to talk over the Marshall plan.

In a joint communique, Bevin and Bidault, noting the necessity of "rapid establishment of over-all programs," declared:

"These programs should be set up by all the countries of Europe disposed to participate in this action in conjunction with the appropriate organism of the United Nations organization."

Bevin and Bidault said they welcomed "with the greatest satisfaction" the Marshall plan and the aid it might offer. They said they believed this aid to be necessary.

The alternative to Russian participation at this time is that the western European countries must go ahead with detailed organizational plans without her, and probably without most or all of the Communist-dominated satellites in her sphere.

Asked what would be the next step if Russia turned thumbs down on the Anglo-French appeal, Herve Alphand, chief of the economic section of the Foreign Office, said that this eventuality had not been considered. Both Bevin and Bidault, he said, had strong hope that Molotov would accept.

Allied Police Hold Yugoslav Boat, Crew for Piracy

Trieste, June 18 (U.P.).—Allied harbor police fired two machine gun bursts across the bow of a Yugoslav police boat today and took the boat and its crew into custody on charges of piracy and violating Anglo-American territorial waters.

The Yugoslav boat was the one which recently picked up three American soldiers who had sailed their pleasure boat into Yugoslav waters. The Americans were interned briefly in Yugoslavia.

Allied police and naval authorities said they had sought the Yugoslav police boat for some time as a piracy suspect. They said it prowled at night along the Venezia Giulia and Italian coasts, stopping Italian fishermen and compelling them to pay "protection" money or surrender part of their catch.

White Elephant, Says Mason

D. C. Wants to Sell Armory To U. S. for What It Cost

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Commissioner Guy Mason yesterday proposed selling the District National Guard Armory to the Federal Government for the $2,700,000 it cost Washington taxpayers.

Mason outlined the proposal after presenting it in executive session to the House District Appropriations Subcommittee. Appropriations Chairman Walt Horan (R., Wash.) said he had called on District and National Guard officials to report on the advantages and financial results of these proposals:

1. Limiting the armory to use as a National Guard drill hall.
2. Renting it for other purposes when not in use for drills.
3. Selling it to outside interests.
4. Increasing its use as a civic assembly hall.

Horan said he had asked Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commanding the District National Guard, to confer with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Chief of Staff, about armory policy.

General Cox last week appointed an eight-member civilian advisory committee to help fix policy for nonmilitary use of the armory.

In their battle with the Guard, the Commissioners have sent a bill to the Budget Bureau to give them control of armory income.

Mason termed the armory a "white elephant" which would cost the District $260,000 for maintenance in the next fiscal year. He said the most the District could get back in revenue would be $70,000 and it would probably be closer to $50,000.

He said it would still be available for local recreation activities if sold to the Government.

President Will Send Decision on Labor Bill To Capitol Tomorrow

Parade at 11:30 Today

'Veto Caravan' Is Fueled Up At Oratorical Pep Meeting

Labor's "veto caravan" took a strong dose of oratory last night as a bracer for its last-stand demonstration against the Taft-Hartley labor bill.

The caravan crowd, filling even the choir seats in Shiloh Baptist Church, was in full accord with the speakers—five Representatives and one Senator who have voted against the bill.

Two of the speakers predicted a presidential veto of the bill tomorrow, but another declared:

"There's darn little you can do now," said Representative Chet Holified (D., Calif.). "This is the pay-off for the lethargy and indifference of labor in the 1946 elections." He called for "reinforcements in 1948."

The caravan, with about 1100 rank-and-file members of the CIO and AFL, rolled into Washington from the West Tuesday to protest the bill and call for its veto.

Predictions of a presidential veto came from Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.) and from Representative Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.). Klein urged delegates to begin a lobbying campaign in the Senate—"your only hope to sustain a veto."

Marcantonio, who termed the bill a part "of a program of domestic fascism," predicted a close vote in the Senate.

Senator Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho), who spoke for 55 minutes, made one reference to the measure:

"It's a damn bad bill," he said. Then he sang and the crowd cheered.

Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.) declared the bill "wrecks collective bargaining. But I don't think it will wreck labor, which withstood tear gas and goon squads in the 1920's."

Union officials said 20 CIO unions and 15 AFL unions are represented in the caravan, which will parade at 11:30 a. m. today.

Appeals on Issue Flood White House; Executive Circles Predict Rejection

President Truman last night was being besieged with a flood of conflicting appeals that he sign or that he veto the labor reform bill.

His message announcing his decision will be sent to Congress tomorrow. As he pondered the problem, the White House revealed that the barrage of telegrams, letters and postal cards dealing with the bill had become by far the greatest received since Mr. Truman became Chief Executive.

Outstanding among newest appeals for approval of the bill was one from Donald R. Richberg, former general counsel of the NRA, who said in a radio talk last night that a veto would be a "mistaken act of friendship" to labor.

Garrison Urges Veto

A few hours previously, more than 40 labor law experts and former Federal officials of the War Labor Board and the National Labor Relations Board urged that Mr. Truman disapprove the measure.

Their message said the legislation "includes many provisions which are extremely unwise, unfair or unworkble." Among its signers were Lloyd K. Garrison, former chairman of the War Labor Board, and Edwin E. Witte, economics professor, University of Wisconsin.

In still another development, Chairman Hartley (R., N. J.) of the House Labor Committee called for an investigation of what he called a "distorted" analysis of the bill by the National Labor Relations Board. The measure is sponsored in Congress by Hartley and Chairman Taft (R., Ohio) of the Senate Labor Committee.

Hartley said he is anxious to find out whether the NLRB analysis "has been deliberately used to foment opposition to the bill throughout the country."

Agency's Advice Questioned

"I am also greatly concerned," he added, "that the President of the United States, in making his decision on this bill, as is the custom, must rely at least in part for guidance upon the advice of this agency which will play so important a part in the law's administration."

Richberg, speaking over Station WINX, said arguments in favor of a veto "are almost entirely political—and short-sightedly political." He said that if Mr. Truman accepts the judgment of Congress in this domestic matter he can rightly call on Congress to accept his judgment on foreign affairs and other matters.

The message from the law experts and former officials said:

"We speak as economists, law-

Gore Attacks GOP Claims Of Savings

Taber Defends Record; Independent Offices Funds Bill Passed

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The House yesterday virtually completed its 1948 "economies" with passage of the $8,167,869,000 Independent Offices bill, but Democrats challenged more than two billion of GOP "savings."

The row exploded in a floor bout between Democratic Challenger Albert Gore (Tenn.) and Appropriations Chairman John Taber (N. Y.). Partisans on both sides mixed in.

When the smoke cleared, Taber had claimed "bullet-proof" 1948 reductions of $3,701,326,029. He said "over-all" Government costs have been whittled $4,483,916,796.

Gore touched off the melee by charging that $2,649,000,000 of the Republican cuts were "phonies." He said only $1,876,716,750 of the House cuts were "bona fide reductions."

The row went into another round when Taber last night released a "progress report" replete with itemized GOP economy claims.

Taber charged President Truman failed to cooperate in cutting costs, adding:

"I have been asked by many anxious persons whether scuttling of the tax relief bill means the end of our Republican economy efforts. My emphatic answer is no."

The so-called "legislative budget," setting spending ceilings for 1948, meanwhile was hopelessly stalemated in conference. All that remained was the initial House vote to slash the President's figures six billion dollars and the Senate's conflicting pledge to cut them 4½ billion.

Following the Gore-Taber fireworks, the House peacefully passed and sent to the Senate the last big departmental bill cutting the Veterans Administration and 32

House Votes To 'Freeze' Old Age Tax

Bill Puts Off Rise In Social Security Levy 2 More Years

By The Associated Press

The House voted unanimously yesterday to hold the old age insurance tax at 1 per cent for two more years.

Representative Reed (R., N. Y.) predicted it is "the last freeze" of present rates that Congress will approve.

The measure will block a two-billion-dollar annual increase in the social security levy beginning next January 1 if passed by the Senate and accepted by President Truman. But it provides increases beginning in 1950.

Without the freeze, the security levy would jump automatically from 1 per cent against employes' wages and employers' payrolls to 2.5 per cent against each starting the first of next year.

The present 1 per cent rate collects about $1,500,000,000 annually and has accumulated $8,700,000,000 in the security trust fund.

The "freeze" measure was presented after a Ways and Means Subcommittee, of which Reed is chairman, examined the needs of the trust fund from which the Government pays old age and survivors insurance.

The new legislation provides for an increase in the tax to 1.5 per cent against wages and payrolls in 1950, and to 2 per cent in 1957 and thereafter. With the inclusion of this formula for future increases, the bill had the support of both Republicans and Democrats.

The measure also continues, to June 30, 1950, increases in Federal contributions to needy aged persons, the blind, and dependent children.

The maximum Federal contribution for each needy case was raised from $20 a month to $25. States also contribute to these benefits.

Three-Month Extension

D. C. Rent Control to April Recommended by House Unit

Extension of local rent controls through March 31, 1948, was recommended by a House District subcommittee yesterday following two days of hearings.

The bill as reported out continues present District rent ceilings for three months beyond the present termination date, and for one month beyond the removal of national rent restrictions, set for February 29.

Unlike the national legislation, however, the District measure retains controls on an as-is basis, without any "voluntary" 15 per cent rent increases.

Only a few minutes before the subcommittee, headed by Representative Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.), reported out the legislation in executive session, spokesmen for several organizations appeared in open session to plead for extension of controls.

Representatives of the Washington League of Women Shoppers, District League of Women Voters, Washington Industrial Union (CIO), Women's Auxiliary of the United Public Workers (CIO), and Washington Housing Association warned that with Government workers' salaries virtually frozen, any increase in their rents would result in dangerous reduction of the family budget for food, clothing and health.

Meanwhile, the District Commissioners joined spokesmen of the real estate organizations here in opposing establishment of rent controls over commercial properties.

In effect, the Commissioners reversed their stand of last year, when they took the position opposing the particular bill under consideration but supporting the prin-

Eastman Kodak President Heads Army-Navy Board

Thomas J. Hargrave, president of the Eastman Kodak Co., yesterday was named chairman of the Army-Navy Munitions Board to succeed Richard R. Deupree.

President Truman made the appointment on the recommendation of Secretary of War Patterson and Secretary of Navy Forrestal.

The board, as reconstituted by the President in August, 1945, is charged with formulating plans for industrial mobilization in the event of an emergency, the stock piling of strategic and critical materials, and the coordination of War and Navy procurement.

It is made up of the chairman, the Undersecretary of War and the Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

Full-Dress Probe Of Clark Sought

Senator Ferguson to Submit Report Today on Kansas City Vote Scandal

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Senate Judiciary Committee will be asked today to approve a full-dress senatorial investigation of Attorney General Tom C. Clark and the Justice Department for their handling of an investigation of the Kansas City, Mo., vote fraud scandal, it was disclosed last night.

Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), chairman of a subcommittee that has completed a preliminary study, said he had prepared a report for the full committee.

Copies of the report have been given to the other two members of the subcommittee, Senators William Langer (R., N. Dak.) and Pat McCarran (D., Nev.).

McCarran has already denounced the investigation as "political" and "designed to embarrass the Administration." Langer told a reporter last night that he still had "an open mind" and didn't know yet whether or not he would approve the report.

Prosecutor Named

Last Monday, Clark appointed Richard K. Phelps, a Kansas City attorney who had participated in the Pendergast election cases of 1936, which resulted in the conviction of 250 persons, as a special assistant to bring any prosecutions he deems warranted.

The issue is supercharged with political dynamite, involving as it does a primary in which President Truman took a direct, personal hand.

Asserting that "if he's right, I'm wrong," President Truman sought the aid of the Pendergast machine to purge Representative Roger C. Slaughter (D., Mo.) in the Democratic primaries last August.

Slaughter was defeated by President Truman's candidate, Enos Axtell, who lost the final race to a Republican, Representative Albert L. Reeves.

A county grand jury found last May that Slaughter had been "deprived of the nomination" by a fraudulent miscount of votes, indicted 71 persons, and asked for a recount.

Safe Blown Open

Shortly afterward, the safe containing the ballots was blown open with nitro-glycerin and most of the ballots stolen or destroyed.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation, now making a full study of the case, has said that theft of the ballots will considerably hamper the inquiry.

The Ferguson report, whose contents were being kept a closely guarded secret yesterday, has two main recommendations:

1. That the Senate direct an investigation into the conduct of Attorney General Clark in connection with the failure to bring Federal prosecution.

2. That the Senate appropriate $10,000 to defray the cost of the investigation and authorize an inquiry into such collateral issues as whether or not the FBI should be separated from the Justice Department, and whether changes are needed in election laws.

The report, about 15 pages in length, summarizes the evidence gathered during the priliminary inquiry.

FBI GOT INSTRUCTIONS

Stress is laid upon the fact that FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover testified that the FBI received instructions to make only a "preliminary" investigation of the vote frauds last year, and were directed to interview only six persons.

The report will also point out that three Federal judges in Kansas declared it unnecessary to call a Federal grand jury in the belief the Justice Department was going to order further inquiry into the vote frauds. The order did not come until after congressional demands for an inquiry were raised.

Committee sources said the report will also detail omissions from even the preliminary FBI report in a memorandum laid before the judges by United States District Attorney Samuel Wear.

Resignation Delay Refused By Italy's Provisional Head

Rome, June 18 (AP).—Provisional President Enrico de Nicola refused today to postpone for more than a "brief period" the handing in of his resignation — a resignation which might have the effect of returning Communists and left-wing Socialists to a place in the government.

Premier Alcide de Gasperi and Umberto Terracini, Communist president of the Constituent Assembly, held a two-hour session with De Nicola. Terracini then read a statement on behalf of himself and De Gasperi which said the President agreed to remain in office only long enough "to resolve difficulties."

Presumably this meant only long enough for the assembly to decide on a new president.

Difficult Situation Admitted

The statement admitted that De Nicola's "resolution" to resign created a difficult situation.

Chief difficulty foreseen by all was whether the resignation would pull down also the government hammered out in an 18-day crisis.

De Gasperi completed a cabinet on June 1 which left out Communists and Socialists for the first time since the liberation.

This new government has not yet even won a vote of confidence.

The leftist press said that under the monarchy a government would be obliged to resign at the abdication of the King—nearest comparable situation to the resignation of the President.

De Gasperi's office quoted de Nicola as saying this was not so.

It seemed apparent, however, that a new President, rather than de Nicola, would have the last word on that point.

Ill Health Given as Reason

De Gasperi and Terracini said ill health was the reason de Nicola wanted to resign.

But the Communist organ L'Unita said his desire to resign was "the first consequences of the Christian Democrats' double cross." The Communists have insisted that De Gasperi's leaving them and the Socialists out of the government was a betrayal of the electorate.

Truman Would Benefit Labor By Signing Bill, Richberg Says

President Truman can perform "the more difficult but the real act of friendship" to labor by signing the Taft-Hartley labor bill, said Donald Richberg, former general counsel of NRA, in a radio talk last night over Station WINX and WINX-FM.

Richberg's subject was, "Why the President Should Sign the Labor Bill."

"This labor bill was passed not by the enemies of labor in Congress," said Richberg, "but by labor's friends."

He said the President is also "a friend of labor," but that a veto of the bill would be "misplaced friendship."

In support of his argument he declared the labor bill was passed "overwhelmingly" by the members of Congress and that it was not "hasty legislation."

"Is it right," he asked, "for the President to set aside the judgment of almost the entire Congress in favor of his own judgment?"

He said that if Mr. Truman accepts the judgment of Congress, "it will give Congress the right to accept his judgment in matters where he has given long study."

He declared that if Mr. Truman vetoes the bill and Congress does not pass it over his veto in this session, even harsher restrictions may confront labor later.

He said, too, that if the President vetoes the labor bill it will convince many, even foreign governments, that he has yielded to pressure. It could mean, Richberg conceded, further demands by these foreign governments and further appeasement.

The other side of the argument, "Why the President Should Veto the Labor Bill," will be presented at 8:15 p. m. tonight over WINX and WINX-FM by Leon Henderson, former OPA Administrator.

Besides the pay boost, the agreement provides for nine paid holidays at sea and a four-week paid vacation in place of the present three.

In negotiations with cargo and pasesnger ship operators, the NMU originally sought a 20 per cent wage increase, six weeks' paid vacations, a 40-hour week instead of the present 48 hours, an increase in the number of men hired for each ship, a health and welfare fund and an increase in the number of holidays granted.

In the early morning hours today, Gibson announced "considerable progress" had been made after a series of talks which began last night. He never succeeded in staging a joint meeting at this parley.

On the West Coast, Nathan Feinsinger, Labor Department trouble shooter, said at San Francisco he believed the situation was in hand.

Freight Embargo Ordered

The American Association of Railroads yesterday clamped an embargo on all freight shipments destined for American ships in the Nation's ports.

The stoppage has not affected loading and unloading of ships on either coast but the CIO unions have sought to prevent sailing of all ships operated by lines with which their contacts expired last Sunday midnight.

More vessels have been affected on the East than West Coast since most ships in the Pacific are manned by AFL seamen.

[Curran has estimated that 700 ships were tied up by the strike. He said that if the tie-up becomes complete the number would be almost doubled, and a stoppage of tanker operations would bring the total to around 2000 ships.—Editor's Note.]

Senate Ready To Vote Today On Wool Bill

The Senate agreed yesterday to vote at 2:30 this afternoon on the bill to support the price of wool—a bill which Administration leaders have condemned as a violation of the reciprocal trade program.

The vote was set shortly after Undersecretary of State Will Clayton told a news conference that its enactment would be a tragic mistake and would have a seriously unfavorable effect on the trade negotiations at Geneva.

Senators Barkley (D., Ky.) and O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) warned during a brief debate yesterday that enactment of the bill as approved by the Senate-House conference would force a presidential veto. Both Senators said the provision empowering the President to impose import quotas or raise tariffs threatened the international trade policies of the Administration.

Senator Robertson (R., Wyo.) also said other nations would regard passage of the bill in its present form as a "high-tariff isolation" move by the United States. He said a veto could not possibly be overridden by the House, since the original bill passed only by a 20-vote margin.

Gore Attacks 2 Billions Of GOP Savings as 'Phony'

other Independent agencies a grand total of $330,540,732.

The House voted only one change—an amendment prohibiting the construction of new veterans' hospitals at Tallahassee, Fla., and on the Nevius tract in Arlington County, Va.

Gore charged GOP House reductions included these "phony cuts":

Postponement of tax refunds	$800,000,000
Additional revenue from ship sales	505,075,000
Downward revision of budget by the President	291,075,000
Treasury cancellation of CCC notes	642,000,000
Abolishing Maritime Commission revolving fund	108,000,000
Atomic Energy Commission part-year appropriation	75,000,000
Contract authorization instead of appropriation for veterans' hospitals	30,300,000
Substitution of contract authorization for money already appropriated	50,000,000
Deferral of appropriations for veterans' pensions	50,000,000
Contract authorization substituted for appropriation for Hill-Burton hospital program	50,000,000
UNRRA funds unused by Maritime Commission	47,700,000
Total	$2,649,150,000

Gore brought Republicans to their feet with this series of charges: (1) that GOP budget claims are "irresponsible;" (2) that they are claiming as savings "not only phony reductions but additional revenue as well;" (3) that many House-claimed reductions will be restored by the Senate or reappear as "deficiencies" in 1948, and (4) that Republicans are the real "spenders" now.

The party-line row followed with Taber chiefly backstopped by Representatives Frank B. Keefe (R., Wis.) and Richard B. Wigglesworth (R., Mass.) and Gore supported by John J. Rooney (D., N. Y.), A. S. (Mike) Monroney (D., Okla.) and others.

Taber charged House Democrats had not offered a single amendment this session to cut appropriations. He said each of the savings challenged by Gore was legitimate except for the CCC item. He said Republicans claimed only 188 million savings from CCC note cancellations.

Keefe accused Gore of "gleefully" jeering at GOP attempts to cut the budget. Gore said he was "trying to keep the record straight and prevent sleight of hand bookkeeping."

Here are the departmental reductions Taber claimed in a statement last night, compared with what Gore contended on the floor were the "bona fide" cuts:

Treasury-Post-office	$97,072,750	$897,072,750
Labor-Federal Security	28,825,520	78,825,520
Interior Department	161,413,513	134,006,907
State, Commerce, Judiciary	159,645,031	159,645,031
War Department	435,809,077	435,809,077
Navy Department	377,519,200	377,519,200
Agriculture	343,427,742	340,969,342
Gov't corporations	14,847,550	28,887,470
Independent offices	175,240,732	330,540,732
Totals	$1,876,716,750	$2,783,276,029

Taber brought his total departmental cuts to $3,701,326,029 by listing these additional "savings": U. S. Maritime Commission, $120,900,000; revised estimates resulting from committee investigations, $292,075,000; additional revenue resulting from the sale and charter of vessels, $505,075,000.

He said the GOP had cut Government costs over-all by $4,483,916,796 by these additional measures:

"Rescissions" and recoveries totaling $2,277,023,325 of which the President proposed to spend 500 million in 1948.

Savings in appropriations for use in 1947, totaling $282,590,767.

yers and educators representing no organization or partisan interest. We are unanimous in the conviction that the Taft-Hartley bill should not become law.

"This omnibus bill . . . goes far beyond the legitimate purposes of curbing union abuses or providing equality of bargaining rights and duties.

"It would seriously weaken protection of Norris-LaGuardia Act and National Labor Relations (Wagner) Act. It provides no constructive solution to problem of national strikes. It would increase industrial unrest and strife."

Millis Among Signers

Among the signers were Harry A. Millis, former chairman of the NLRB, and Nathan Feinsinger, former public member of the WLB. Frank Graham and Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) also former WLB public members, have previously expressed vigorous opposition to the bill.

Another former member of the NLRB, William M. Leiserson, did not sign the telegram but told The Post yesterday he was against the bill.

Other signers of the telegram included Thomas Emerson, former general counsel of the OWMR; Walter Gellhorn, professor of law at Columbia University; Charles O. Gregory, professor of law at the University of Chicago; Harry Shulman, the impartial Ford Motors umpire; E. Wight Bakke, director of the Yale University Labor Management Center; Paul Dodd, dean of the University of California at Los Angeles; and Mark De Wolfe Howe, dean of the University of Buffalo Law School.

There were some 30 more names, mostly university law and economics professors.

Mail Sets Record

Presidential Secretary Eben Ayers revealed that some 700,000 messages have poured in regarding the bill, and 10,000 are arriving daily. Through Monday there had been 157,000 letters, more than half a million cards and 25,000 telegrams.

Ayers said "a heavy majority" favors a veto.

Meantime, the CIO yesterday took to the White House another petition asking for a veto, said to be signed by half a million union workers.

The conviction was almost solid in executive branch circles yesterday that Mr. Truman would reject the bill. The biggest question was whether the Senate would muster the two-thirds majority to override it. That the House will vote better than two to one to override is taken for granted.

If there is a veto, it is possible that the House would act on it at once. The Senate, however, according to some of its leaders, will probably defer action until Monday or Tuesday.

ciple of commercial rent control.

Spokesmen for the Washington Real Estate Board and the Building Owners and Managers Association of Metropolitan Washington, argued against commercial controls, and insisted that the office and store space situation was easing up in the District. They also contended that all but a few commercial property owners were justified in their recent rent raises. These increased rentals were stimated by Rufus Lusk, representative of the Building Owners and Managers, at 10 to 20 per cent.

The Woodward bldg., 15th and H sts. nw., again came under attack on charges of "gouging" tenants with rental increases since new owners took over the building the beginning of the year.

Raymond M. Taylor, vice president of the Real Estate Board, disclosed to the committee that board representatives had voluntarily intervened, and obtained a blanket rent and lease-terms reduction in at least 33 cases, from $3.50 a square foot with a five-year lease, to $3 a square foot with a one-year lease.

Chairman O'Hara charged that the Woodward bldg. operators had refused the subcommittee's request for information concerning rent increases, and that the subcommittee was considering issuing a subpena for the owners to produce the data.

District Dogs Face Rabies Vaccination

District dogs would cringe if they heard a proclamation issued by the Commissioners yesterday.

They'll "get the point" sooner or later, anyway, because the city heads set aside a period between July 7 and August 8 for vaccination of dogs against rabies.

Owners are required to submit their dogs to the needle, but may have the job done either by District or private veterinarians, the Commissioners ruled.

Those wishing to make the District foot the bill may bring their dogs to any of the following clinics between 4 and 6 p. m. on Mondays, Wednesdays or Fridays during the month period:

Shirley Highway Contract Is Let

Richmond, Va., June 18 (AP).—The State Highway Department awarded a $1,110,000 contract today for construction of another long section of the Henry G. Shirley Memorial Highway in Fairfax County. The department disclosed that it intends to put new work throughout the State under contract at the rate of four million dollars a month for the rest of 1947, if satisfactory bids can be obtained.

The Shirley Memorial Highway contract went to Nello L. Teer of Durham, N. C., for construction of 4.3 miles of divided four-lane roadway just south of Route 236, 2.03 miles of oiled connecting service roads, and an overpass at the intersection of Route 644.

Greece Offers Wide Reforms

heal some of the political feuds that have kept the country in turmoil since its liberation.

Other promises made in the note were:

1. Thorough overhauling of the tax system, including the wiping out of tax evasion, which has been rampant in Greece as long as anyone can remember;

Public Budget Planned

2. The use of a public budget to control expenses;

3. Vigorous efforts to push exports, to provide foreign exchange;

4. The limiting of imports to those "essential to the Greek economy";

5. A "vigorous program" to hold down prices, coupled with continued rent control and rationing and new controls on credit and banking;

6. Efforts to increase the productivity of labor, while fostering the right of workers to organize and join "free democratic labor unions."

7. Intensive efforts to improve the Greek civil service and government organization generally.

In addition, the note promised that the Greek government would strive for "the restraint of excesses and extravagances on the part of any segment of the population."

All these pledges amounted to an acceptance of proposals made by Secretary Marshall in his statement of February 15, before the 300-million-dollar aid program had even been formulated within the Administration.

Three notes in all were published by the State Department yesterday. The first, dated May 26, was a brief and formal American note telling Greece that the President had been authorized to extend aid. It asked for "an indication from the Greek government of its general recovery program and assurances that the proffered assistance would be effectively utilized."

The second was the Greek reply, dated June 15, containing the promises and the offer of wide powers to Griswold. In this note the Greek government said it was "profoundly touched" by America's willingness to help, and that "any assistance it may receive will be used in conformance with the purposes for which it may be made available."

Formal Accord Suggested

The Greek note concluded by suggesting that the two governments enter into a formal agreement on these matters.

The third note published yesterday was a brief reply noting the Greek assurances "with satisfaction" and announcing that Ambassador Lincoln MacVeigh in Athens had been authorized to negotiate such an agreement.

The State Department yesterday announced the appointment of George C. McGhee as Coordinator of Aid to Greece and Turkey—an appointment first reported in The Post on June 6. McGhee, who has been special assistant to Undersecretary Clayton, will officially assume his new post within a few days.

Help to Europeans With Grain Surplus, Gold Suggested

Undersecretary of State Will Clayton suggested yesterday that Russia might be willing to join the United States in promoting the reconstruction of Europe.

In any recovery program drawn up by the European nation themselves, Clayton told a news conference, Russia's place might easily be among the nations contributing help, especially to its eastern European neighbors.

He cited American reports of excellent crop prospects in the Soviet Union.

He added that no response or comment had been received, either from the Soviet Embassy here or through the American Embassy in Moscow, to Secretary Marshall's now famous proposals at Harvard on June 5.

Soviets to Aid Poland

The Soviet government has already agreed to help Poland by a 29 million dollar gold loan, announced during Polish Premier Cyrankiewicz's visit to Moscow last March. The Soviet Union's gold reserves are a jealously guarded secret, but its annual production is believed to be as high as 200 million dollars worth annually. Some of this gold, if made available to the eastern European satellites, could relieve their present shortage of "hard" foreign exchange.

As for Soviet grain, it could be useful in eastern and western Europe in relieving the present dependence on American grain and freeing American shipping for greater exports of seed, fertilizer and farm machinery.

Russia itself is short of fertilizer and farm machinery—so short that it has stripped Romania of them and turned what used to be one of Europe's bread baskets into a famine area. As for grain, Clayton's remark yesterday recalled Generalissimo Stalin's offer to Foreign Secretary Bevin last March that Russia might let Britain have some wheat in case of a good harvest.

Clayton yesterday gave the first official State Department indorsement to Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg's proposal of last week for a bipartisan council to advise on the limits of possible American assistance. He said the Vandenberg proposal was very wise, so far as it involved a study of American resources and American ability to help.

As for determining the needs of Europe, Clayton said the Government already had excellent facilities for checking the accuracy of any estimate that might be submitted by the European countries.

Bevin Trip Pleases

He said the State Department was, of course, pleased to see that Bevin had gone to Paris to discuss the planning of European recovery. But he held fast to Secretary Marshall's contention that Europe must do its own planning and work out its own programs for submission to Washington.

On his coming visit to London, he said, he would do more listening than talking. There is no American "program" for European reconstruction and there will be none, he insisted, until the European countries outline what they can do to help themselves.

He disclosed that notes had been received from Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, expressing interest in Marshall's Harvard proposals and their willingness to give all possible assistance. These three countries have been the first in Europe to plan a genuine economic union, including a customs union, among themselves.

$1,000,000 in Coins Discovered in Nagoya

Tokyo, Japan, June 18 (U.P.).—Allied officials today discovered an enormous store of coins hidden in the bomb-blasted city of Nagoya and ordered the Japanese government to impound the money, worth an estimated $1,000,000.

Japanese officials will prepare an inventory showing countries of origin of the coins, now stored in a looted property warehouse in Osaka.

U. S. Military Scrip Faked In Germany, Senators Hear

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Senate investigators into America's monetary troubles in Germany learned yesterday that counterfeit United States military certificates are circulating there.

This was disclosed by Army officials as former Assistant Secretary of War John J. McCloy revealed that the wartime transfer to Russia of engraved plates for printing occupation currency was a carefully considered top-level decision of the American Government.

McCloy, now president of the World Bank, said he "understood" that former Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., and former Secretary of State Cordell Hull authorized the transfer.

He added, under questioning by Senator Morse (R., Oreg.) that he "has the impression" that they consulted the late President Roosevelt before acting.

Another witness, Andrew N. Overby special assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, testified that Morgenthau authorized the release of the plates to Russia.

Flood of Red Marks

Soviet Russia flooded Germany with occupation marks printed from the plates, resulting in a continuing drain on the German economy. Senator Bridges (R., N. H.) declared that American taxpayers are having to foot the bill for this.

"We are having to appropriate hundreds of millions of dollars to support the German economy," he said, "while the Russians are engaged in legalized looting by use of this printing press money."

Maj. Gen. George J. Richards, War Department budget officer, revealed the Army's new difficulties involving counterfeiting. He said that when the United States stopped issuing military marks last September—in an effort to straighten out the difficulties resulting from the uncontrolled monetary situation in the Reich—American troops were paid in military occupation certificates.

Source Being Traced

In April of this year, about three weeks after a new issue of these certificates came out, counterfeit notes appeared. He said efforts are being made to trace the source but declined to discuss the matter further in open session.

Assistant Secretary of State John H. Hilldring defended the decision of April, 1944—to ship the plates to Russia, as "a reasonable one at the time."

The big Russian drive into Poland was under way, he said, and our invasion of the continent was not far off. Advancing armies must have plenty of currency—just as they must have other supplies.

We had got the Russians, British and French to agree to use the same occupation money—and the latter were willing for us to print it. But, said Hilldring, the Soviets insisted on having duplicate plates, saying otherwise they would print their own money.

We either had to yield to them," he added, or "make the first decision that we could not get along—that there would be two Germanys."

And we would have made the first break in dividing Germany, Hilldring said.

Chairman Bridges characterized the decision as "naive and gullible."

Hilldring challenged this. He said that officials fully realized the situation. There was an agreement, he went on, between Russia, the United States and Britain—later ratified in more detail by the heads of state at Potsdam—that there would be joint control and accounting of money issued.

Russia never lived up to this agreement, Hilldring declared. He testified later, however, that the Soviets notified the Allied Control Commission in Berlin that they had ceased issuing Allied military marks on July 1, 1946. Assistant Secretary of War Howard Petersen testified Tuesday that Russia still was printing the marks.

Hearing Is Ended

Hilldring added that he had no knowledge whether the Russians actually have stopped issuing the currency or not.

The joint hearing on the military mark question held the past two days by the Senate Appropriations, Armed Services and Banking Committees, was concluded late yesterday. The War Department was directed to furnish a great deal of data for inclusion into the record.

The Senators ordered that copies of the complete record be sent to the Secretaries of State, War and Treasury. They will be asked for a policy recommendation on what should be done to remedy the situation.

Bank Holding Curbs Pass Senate Group

A bill designed to regulate bank holding companies was approved unanimously by the Senate Banking Committee yesterday.

The measure, introduced by Senator Tobey (R., N. H.), would require bank holding companies to divest themselves of nonbanking subsidiaries within two years, and to obtain Federal Reserve Board approval before acquiring any new banking subsidiaries.

Senate Votes Rate Leeway For Railroads

By a vote of 60 to 27, the Senate yesterday passed the Reed-Bulwinkle bill to free railroads and all other land and water carriers from antitrust action against rate-fixing and other practices.

Interstate Commerce Commission approval would be required for rate and other agreements.

The vote was two more than the two-thirds majority required to override predicted presidential veto, but Democratic opponents hope for a last-minute switch of enough to sustain President Truman if he refuses to approve the measure.

Barkley's "Fervent Hope"

Senate Minority Leader Alben W. Barkley (D., Ky.) said he "fervently hoped" President Truman would veto the measure, which he called "vicious legislation."

The bill now goes to the House, and even its opponents concede it will have a swift and overwhelming passage there.

The House last year passed a similar bill by a 277-to-55 vote, but it died without action in the Senate.

Before acting finally, the Senate wrote in by voice vote an amendment by Senator Russell (D., Ga.) which he said assure that enactment of the bill will not interfere with a Supreme Court decision in the suit filed by the State of Georgia.

Charged Conspiracy

The State charged that the railroads have entered into a conspiracy to discriminate against the South by maintaining freight rates which are higher than those in the North.

Senator Clyde M. Reed (R., Kans.), author of the Senate bill, accepted the amendment. He said frequently during debate that the purpose of the legislation is not to prevent a Supreme Court decision in that case.

The Russell amendment provides that enactment of the Reed-Bulwinkle bill shall not deprive any party to the suit of relief to which they would otherwise be entitled.

A number of other amendments, proposed originally by Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) and modified by agreement with Reed, were adopted by voice vote.

The bill provides that the Interstate Commerce Commission must give prior approval to all rate-making conferences between railroads. One of the O'Mahoney-Reed changes says that such approval shall be conditioned on a finding that the objective sought is not "unjustly discriminatory" as between "geographical regions or areas."

Another stipulated that no bank or other financial institution shall be a party to any rate-making conference or organization.

Barkley led the opposition, composed for the most part by Southerners. He said he was acutely aware of the differential between Northern and Southern freight rates because his State, Kentucky, lies on the Ohio River which is the dividing line.

Ohio, which is just across the river, enjoys lower rates than Kentucky, he said, although there is no difference in cost to the roads.

'Big 3' Relief Parley Sought

tion to speak unofficially said privately that they saw little likelihood of Russian agreement to take part in the Marshall plan now.

A United Press Moscow dispatch disclosed that the British Ambassador to Russia saw Molotov last night and that the French charge d'affaires saw Vice Foreign Minister A. Y. Malik, seeking the official Russian view of the Marshall plan.

[Sir Maurice Peterson, British Ambassador to Moscow, disclosed, according to the International News Service, that Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov is "interested" in the Marshall plan of aiding Europe, but has not committed Russia to participation. He saw Molotov Tuesday night.—Editor's note.]

The possibility was seen that the reports of the envoys, which must have reached Bevin and Bidault today, gave some hope that Molotov at least was willing to talk over the situation.

It was announced officially by the French that Bevin had agreed to the French plan to set up a special European commission to start work on the Marshall plan.

There was something of a minor sensation tonight when Alphand denied emphatically, on behalf of the Foreign Office, that this was correct. Alphand said that the question had not even been discussed by Bevin and Bidault in their talks here. Both men, he said, agreed there could be no discussion of a specific organization for handling the Marshall plan until it was known whether Russia would take part.

So important a turn did the talks take that Bevin abandoned his plan to return to London tonight and decided instead to go tomorrow, just in time to take part in a foreign affairs debate in Commons.

Belgium Seeks Part

Brussels, Belgium, June 18 (U.P.). The Belgian Senate tonight approved a motion asking that Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg be allowed to take part in negotiations among European nations on Secretary of State Marshall's plan for European recovery.

The motion was signed by Catholics, socialists and liberals and praised Marshall's speech as "considerably consolidating world peace."

Martin Predicts Passage Of Leave Bond Cashing Bill

By The Associated Press

A prediction that Congress will vote at this session to permit veterans to cash their terminal leave bonds immediately was made yesterday by Speaker Martin (R., Mass.).

Meanwhile, a House committee acted to deny Communists any veterans' benefits.

Martin told newsmen that Congress, using "savings" obtained through budget reductions, could permit payment of the leave bonds right away and thus reduce the national debt against which they are now charged. Treasury figures show that veterans now own $1,830,455,000 worth of the bonds.

He said the step also would save the Government money this way:

The Treasury can now borrow money at 1½ per cent. But it is paying 2½ per cent interest on the bonds, which do not mature and cannot be cashed for five years after date of issue.

Martin said the measure should allow veterans to retain the bonds until they mature, if they wish to do so.

A few hours earlier, the House Veterans Committee, in executive session and without advance notice, approved a bill to deny all veterans' benefits to (a) Communists, (b) those in sympathy with the party's aims and (c) those owing allegiance to Russia.

Representative Crow (R., Pa.), a wartime colonel and author of the bill, said it would cover terminal leave bonds, educational rights and subsistence allowances and any future benefits voted veterans.

Crow said only one committee member voted against the proposal.

Howard U. Audience Hears Nigerian Independence Plea

NNAMDI AZIKIWE
". . . We sent our sons to fight"

Independence for Nigeria, wealthiest of all tropical dependencies in the British colonial empire with the exception of India, was urged at Howard University last night by Nnamdi Azikiwe, leader of the West African country's nationalist movement.

The American-educated Azikiwe, frequently called the African Gandhi, is president of the National Council of Nigeria and the Cameroons.

He is also editor of the West African Pilot and Zik's Press, Ltd., a chain of five newspapers, in an area that is partly a British-owned colony and largely a protectorate, and is the equivalent in size of seven or eight American States.

"In World War I we sent our sons to fight; afterward we saw no difference in our treatment," he told an audience of more than 100 persons, including State Department representatives.

"After World War II we are experiencing the same thing. If we are good enough to fight to save England from herrenvolkism we are good enough to be free from it ourselves.

"We seek freedom because it is a just aspiration for any people. British relations with Nigeria are based on treaty obligations. Nigeria is a protectorate and not a British colony. Nigeria played her part in the last war with the Allies, hoping that afterward she might enjoy the four freedoms.

"If we make an analysis of colonial systems, there is no doubt Britain's has been the best, but if you look at us as humans, we are entitled to our place."

Azikiwe, born in southern Nigeria in 1904 the son of a government clerk, came to the United States in 1925. With the money his father had saved and money earned here in menial jobs, he attended Storer College, Harpers Ferry, W. Va., and Lincoln University in Pennsylvania. In appreciation of his education he recently presented each of the two universities $1000.

Early in July he will head a Nigerian delegation to London to seek a plan of independence from the British government.

Sentenced to Die

Belgrade, June 18 (AP).—A people's court in Osijek has sentenced Chirilo Kralj, a wartime Ustashi leader, to be shot on charges of slaughtering several hundred Serbs in Croatia, organizing punitive expeditions against Serbs and Jews, and forcibly converting orthodox Serbs to Catholicism.

U. S. to Take Over Threatened Dispute on Mines' Return

By The Associated Press

Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach plans to take over the threatened soft coal dispute July 1 when the Government returns the mines to the owners.

Officials disclosed this yesterday while the Bureau of Mines was reporting that only enough coal to last the Nation 33 days was above ground on May 1—last date for which figures are available.

An official of the bureau said that total—an 11.6 per cent drop from April—was mainly due to heavy exports. A 30-day stockpile is considered serious, he said. A 40-day supply would be normal.

Schwellenbach might even move into the soft coal picture before July, it was reported, to attempt to negotiate a contract in time to forestall a possible strike.

Vacation Agreed To

He would have until July 7, when a 10-day miners' vacation ends. The vacation was agreed to by the miners and the Government.

If the Taft-Hartley labor bill becomes law, its new conciliation service would not become operative for 60 days. Meanwhile, the Labor Secretary and his conciliation service would be the only Government officials to mediate between mine leader John L. Lewis and the operators.

The Bureau of Mines said wartime stockpiles averaged as high as 64 days, and even after the strike of last November and December, the January 1 supply was enough for 32 days.

Contract negotiations between the United Mine Workers and private operators broke off recently when the Southern operators, representing 25 per cent of the industry, were unwilling to accept terms of the agreement now in effect between the miners and the Government.

The Northern and Western operators have indicated they would settle for that contract.

Code Extension Gains Favor

A proposal to extend the present temporary Federal mine safety code—set up under Government operation of the coal mines—gained quick support yesterday.

Senator Butler (R., Nebr.), presiding at a Public Lands subcommittee hearing, said he and Senator Kilgore (D., W. Va.) will cooperate on a proposal to speed continuance of the code rather than enact new Federal legislation to tighten mine safety.

Kilgore said he will abandon attempts to get permanent legislation enacted before Congress adjourns if the safety code is extended.

The move indicates at least a truce on one phase of the bitter feud between Secretary of the Interior Krug and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers.

Lewis and other UMW leaders opposed Kilgore's earlier proposal to give the department's Bureau of Mines broad powers to set up and enforce mine regulations.

Senate Group Backs Episcopalians' Bill

A Senate District Subcommittee has approved a bill to let Washington Episcopal Church parishes write their own by-laws for vestry elections, Committee Counsel James R. Kirkland announced yesterday.

He said the subcommittee, headed by Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.), had also approved bills to let the District give financial support to the Metropolitan Police Band, and to give the Commissioners a $10,000 fund for entertaining out-of-town officials.

U. N. Won't Lump Atom With Arms

Gromyko Predicts Action Will Mean Collapse of Efforts at Disarmament

Lake Success, N. Y., June 18 (U.P.).—The United Nations Disarmament Commission refused today to link atomic control with negotiations on general disarmament, and Soviet Delegate Andrei Gromyko immediately predicted that the action will cause disarmament efforts to "collapse."

"The artificial separation of these two questions will involve the collapse of efforts to implement the U. N. General Assembly resolution on regulation of armaments and this with all of its consequences," Gromyko said.

Delegates of France, Britain and Belgium promptly denied Gromyko's charge that they had violated a General Assembly mandate. After the meeting United States officials joined in the denial.

For three and one-half hours, Gromyko sat with reasonable patience while the commission, paragraph-by-paragraph, voted down a long list of Soviet and Polish attempts to tie atomic control with disarmament talks. The commission, ignoring previous Soviet warnings, also approved, 8 to 1, an American-backed work plan that would keep the two subjects separate.

No Veto Here

Only Gromyko voted against it, but he does not hold a veto in the disarmament commission. Poland and Colombia abstained.

The commission gave a strong Anglo-American bloc everything it wanted, but Gromyko's one-minute speech made other delegates jump.

It probably was Gromyko's most defiant action since he walked out of the Security Council a year ago.

After the meeting broke up, Gromyko in comparatively good humor, refused to tell reporters whether his angry words meant he would boycott future meetings of the disarmament commission, or veto the work plan when it goes before the Security Council for final approval.

Protest on Police Force

Gromyko's move was tied in with his efforts to outlaw the atomic bomb immediately and by any means. His insistence on immediate junking of America's atomic weapons has helped create suspicion and delay in the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission. The United States has offered to junk the bomb when international control of atomic energy is established—not before, as Gromyko insists.

Earlier in the Security Council, the small nations protested that the proposad international armed forces might be too small to stop a big-power aggressor.

The complaints came from Belgium, Australia and Syria. They were rejected by each of the Big Five. Gromyko conceded he wanted the size of the force to be "comparatively limited." Other members of the Big Five, while disagreeing with both Gromyko and the small nations, said the problem was not one that should worry the smaller countries.

Big Five representatives, in more than a year of private meetings, agreed on 25 principles, and disagreed on 16. The council decided today to debate the 25 agreed-on items before tackling the others.

The six small nations on the council quickly joined the Big Five in approving the opening principles that the armed forces:

1. Are intended for maintenance of or restoration of peace and security in cases of any threat to peace, any breach of peace, or any act of aggression.

2. May not be used for purposes inconsistent with the purposes of the U. N. Charter.

2. Shall be composed of land, sea and air units which normally are part of the armed forces of U. N. members.

4. Shall be selected from "the best trained and equipped units" of each nation's armed forces.

Then came a principle, accepted by the Big Five, that "the moral weight and the potential power behind any decision to employ the armed forces (of U. N.) . .. will directly influence the size of the armed forces required."

William R. Hodgson of Australia complained that this apparently meant that the Big Five planned to create a small international force which would depend a lot on moral weight to enforce its will.

United States Delegate Herschel Johnson said he did not interpret the dispute paragraph to mean that the forces "may not be used in case of aggression by one of the great powers." He reaffirmed his backing of the item as written. So did Gromyko.

Tunnel Raid Foils Tel Aviv Terrorist Plot

Jerusalem, June 18 (AP).—A band of antiterrorist Jews invaded and blew up a secret tunnel in Tel Aviv today, thus foiling, at the cost of one life, an apparent plot to destroy a British military headquarters, official sources said.

The raid pitted Jew against Jew in an open rupture of underground forces.

Official informants said the partially completed tunnel, apparently dug by Jewish terrorists, was stormed this morning by 14 members of Hagana, moderate underground organization, which has served notice that it will brook no underground violence during the U. N. inquiry, lest the case be prejudiced.

Police said the tunnel was about 10 yards long and that it started in the basement of a private residence and extended under a roadway toward Citrus House, Tel Aviv district military headquarters.

The authorities theorized that the raiders had found a mine placed at the entrance of the tunnel by the terrorists, and that the mine exploded when the Hagana band tried to disassemble it.

Police identified the dead man was Zeev Werber, 20, of Tel Aviv.

[The United Press reported Werber, 20, belonged to the Haganah. Haganah appealed to the public to attend Werber's funeral, describing him as: "An officer who was killed by a mine laid by dissidents when he was sent to save Tel Aviv from an act of provocation."—Editor's note.]

Authorities said they believed the tunnel had been dug by members of Irgun Zvai Leumi. They added that the plan apparently was to blow up the military headquarters if the British carried out the death sentence against three Irgun members sentenced Monday for participating in the attack and delivery at Acre Prison last month.

Sviridov Tells Weems 'No', To Request for 'Confession'

Budapest, June 18 (AP).—Soviet Lieut. Gen. V. P. Sviridov refused today a face-to-face request by United States Brig. Gen. George H. Weems for a copy of the Russian-obtained "confession" that led to last month's Hungarian coup d'etat.

Weems made the request at a meeting of the three-power Allied control commission for Hungary. Sviridov previously had rejected written pleas for copies of the "confessions," which the Russians said they obtained from Bela Kovacs, former secretary general of the Smallholders Party.

Sviridov told Weems and the British member of the commission, Maj. Gen. O. P. Edgecumbe, that Russia "had nothing whatever to do with the recent change in the Hungarian government" and had "no influence at all" in the formation of the new pro-Communist regime.

As to the depositions taken from Kovacs, who has been a Russian prisoner for several months, the Soviet general said they were "written in Hungarian, and I do not understand Hungarian."

The Russians have claimed that the depositions implicated ousted Premier Ferenc Nagy and former House Speaker Bela Varga in a plot to overthrow the Hungarian republic. Hungarian newspapers said recently the two would be tried in absentia as enemies of the state. Nagy now is in the United States, and Varga is reported in exile.

Weems quoted the Russian as saying that he was not acting as the commission chairman, but "only as an intermediary" between the Soviet occupation troops and the Hungarian government, when he turned Kovacs' depositions over to the new Hungarian regime.

Consequently, Sviridov said, the affair did not concern the commission.

Edgecumbe replied that the documents "should have been supplied to my government," and that it was not up to the Russians to decide what was the concern of the British and American governments.

On other matters, Sviridov said the American Relief Agency CARE and a Rockefeller Foundation representative could be cleared to enter Hungary.

Earlier today, Imre Fold, Hungarian manager of the Allied Officers Park Club, said he had been questioned at length by political police concerning certain relatives and that he expected to be thrown into jail "within a short time."

The club is frequented principally by American and British officers.

Ill Treatment Charged

London, June 17 (INS).—A former member of the Hungarian Parliament charged today at his Budapest trial with 42 others accused of conspiracy that he was so ill-treated in prison he was unconscious for nearly a week.

The statement by former Deputy Tibor Ham was made in support of the defendant's claim that certain parts of a deposition read in court were wrung from him by mistreatment in prison. The trial proceedings were reported by Reuters.

Cathedral Ave. Woman Finds Horse on Porch at 2 A. M.

A gentle, old black horse, which grazes on the Stimson estate at 3000 Cathedral ave. nw., keeps strange visiting hours, neighbors will swear.

Around 2 a. m. yesterday, she clop-clopped down the street and right onto the front porch of Mrs. Herbert Bingham's home at 3104 Cathedral ave. nw.

Mrs. Bingham, just ready to retire for the night, thought it must be nightmare until she looked outside. Police also thought it was a nightmare when she called for help and sent no one.

But her second plea by telephone of "please send a policeman here quickly because I'm running out of sugar cubes" brought results; namely four scout cars.

The old horse was led home by the rope she had dragged behind her, while numerous passersby rubbed their eyes and chortled at the sight.

"That horse did everything but ring the doorbell to attract attention. I think she wanted to go home, because she actually led me all the way back to her stable," Pvt. Luther Gentry, of the Eighth Precinct, remarked later.

She and a caretaker are the only occupants of the estate right now, he said.

Population Flees Town Pounded by Iowa River Floodwaters

Oakville, Iowa, June 18 (AP).—Flood waters of the Iowa River pounded relentlessly at Oakville late today and evacuation of its 400 inhabitants and most of the army of workmen striving to repel the stream was speeded up.

The river's crest was expected to arrive at midnight (CST).

All but nine families of residents had departed by mid-afternoon and they were ready to leave on short notice.

A flood-fighting army of troops, Coast Guardsmen and civilians numbering 1000 was reduced to 200 as water continued to rise over the one remaining road to dry land.

Oakville itself was dry, but Mayor O. D. Johnson expressed the fear of inundation from backwaters swirling through at least three breaks in the protecting dikes.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation declared central and southern Iowa a "disaster area," and announced its Chicago office would accept applications for disaster loans for reconstruction of private property damaged by the floods.

Army engineers estimated that approximately 150,000 acres of land stood under water and that several hundred thousand more were in danger of a like fate.

The Mississippi, which last week inundated 104,000 acres between Keokuk, Iowa, and Cairo, Ill., appeared building itself up to another big overflow. The stage at Burlington, 25 miles downstream from Oakville, was 15.7 feet this morning, a 24-hour rise of a foot. A 17-foot crest was predicted there for tomorrow or Friday.

Further downstream the crest of the destructive Des Moines River, which twice in two weeks has caused millions in damage and driven thousands of persons from their homes, was pounding to a junction with the Mississippi at Keokuk, Iowa.

Already the Des Moines had spread over thousands of acres of Missouri farm land where the stream serves as the Iowa-Missouri borderline.

Canton, Mo., a community of 2200 persons about 25 miles south of Keokuk, remained half covered with water from last week's record crest of 19.99 feet. A reinforced sandbag barricade surrounded the city power plant, and a levee which broke last week had been repaired.

A principal danger spot in that area was along the 56-mile levee below Quincy, Ill., and opposite Hannibal, Mo. The levee protects 120,000 acres from which most stock, stored grain and furniture already have been removed from 400 farms.

After the crests of the Iowa and Des Moines rivers are dumped into the Mississippi the latter is expected to approach, if not exceed, the record stages set last week as far south as Louisiana, Mo.

Westward across Missouri, the Missouri and Charlton rivers threatened new floods.

The Kansas City Weather Bureau warned that "a very serious" situation exists in extreme southwest Iowa, north Missouri, northeast Kansas and southeast Nebraska. Additional heavy rains were forecast, causing "continued flooding and increasing danger until rains cease," the bureau said.

Senate Votes Emergency Funds for Flood Areas

Alarmed by the threat of new floods in the Middle West, the Senate yesterday unanimously approved and sent to President Truman a bill authorizing 15 million dollars for emergency flood control work.

Traffic Toll Seen 'National Disaster'

Truman Gratified Over Safety Progress But Urges Nation to Greater Efforts

A traffic toll of 33,000 and more than a million injured in 1946 "is a tribute to inefficiency this Nation cannot afford," President Truman warned yesterday. "We are dealing here with what amounts to a national disaster."

Speaking before his second annual Highway Safety Conference in the Interior Department auditorium, Mr. Truman expressed gratification over a decline in traffic casualties. But he called on motorists and safety officials to further reduce "the appalling destruction of life and property."

The three-day meeting, called to review progress since the first conference here last year, drew the governors of three states, officials of many more and nattily uniformed highway patrolmen and troopers from 30.

District Wins Award

The President's 100-word address preceded presentation of 1946 traffic and pedestrian safety awards to Washington, Omaha, Nebr., and Connecticut.

Commissioner J. Russell Young received a plaque from Representative Clifford Davis (D., Tenn.), as the District's award in the National Safety Council's National Traffic Safety Contest.

The award was based on Washington's low figure of 59 fatalities in 1946—lowest in cities of its classification.

(Although police records show 72 fatilities for the year, the Safety Council bases its conclusions on fatilities in which only autos are involved.—Editor's note.)

"If every city had done as well" in reducing fatilities, "more than 2000 lives would have been saved throughout the United States," Davis said. Washington also won awards in 1940, and honorable mention in 1943 and 1944.

The grand award plaque was based on the District's system of keeping accident records, enforcement, engineering and safety campaigns as well as its low figure of 59 fatilities in 1946—lowest in cities of its classification.

Washington also received a second plaque for second place in the National Pedestrian Safety Contest.

Termed "National Disaster"

Connecticut's award, its sixth recognition in as many years, was received by Gov. James L. McConaughy and Omaha's by Mayor Charles Leeman.

They were presented in the National Pedestrian Protection Contest by Lou E. Holland, chairman of the American Automobile Association's traffic safety committee.

President Truman, in citing a "sharp and gratifying decline" in highway fatality under 1941's peak toll, declared "we have won a major victory in the campaign against carelessness."

The Chief Executive lauded the conference "action program" as a "sound and workable" one and renewed his 1946 plea for a strong driver license program by states and a uniform driving code over the country.

Today's session at the Interior auditorium will convene at 9:15 a. m. and conclude at 4:55 p. m. More than 400 were registered for the conference.

Recommendations of the advisory group on Laws and Ordinances were made to the afternoon meeting by Florence E. Allen of Cleveland, judge of the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals.

George H. Gallup, of the Gallup Poll, gave recommendations of the group on accident records.

Idle Benefits Hold to Same Level in Md.

Annapolis, Md., June 18 (AP).—Russell S. Davis, chairman of the Unemployment Compensation Board, told Governor Lane today there has been little variation in idle benefits paid during the last month.

In a letter to the chief executive, Davis noted "some of the claimants are out of work because of seasonal layoffs."

Payments during the week ended June 14 totaled $296,714, as compared with $288,994 the week ended May 24.

In the county offices 5,398 checks totaling $87,437 were issued, and in Baltimore 10,461 checks totaling $189,765. Meanwhile, out-of-State claimants received 951 checks totaling $19,512.

Veterans' readjustment payments for the week totaled $132,608, with 2,525 checks totaling $50,153 paid in the counties and 4,142 checks totaling $82,455 in Baltimore.

In the separate category of unemployed persons, there were 285 checks paid out totaling $27,190.

The State reserve at the end of the week was $117,902,063.

Hearing on City Insurance Law Bills Set Today

Bills to change Washington insurance laws will be reviewed today by a Senate District Subcommittee headed by Senate District Chairman C. Douglass Buck (R., Del.).

Buck's group will hear testimony on the bills beginning at 10 a. m. in the Capitol District Committee Room.

Also slated for a hearing is a bill to let the District sell a part of the Pennsylvania Railroad yard in southwest Washington to the railroad. The area to be sold, once the 1200 block of E st. sw., has been used by the railroad for many years, but the District has retained the title.

Text of Truman Address to Highway Parley

Text of President Truman's address to his second Highway Safety Conference follows:

IT is a pleasure to welcome you to the second Highway Safety Conference. You are here to grapple with a problem of prime importance to every resident of our Nation. Please accept my hearty personal thanks for your attendance.

Automobiles—including trucks and buses—traveled nearly 350 billion vehicle miles last year over the streets and highways of the United States. This tremendous volume of travel was the greatest in the history of our country. It exceeded that of 1941, the next highest year, by 4 per cent.

In a very real sense, the increase in postwar highway travel is a measure of our return to the happier peacetime pattern of life in America. There is one tragic aspect of that pattern, however, that no one wishes to see restored. I refer to the appalling destruction of life and property through highway accidents.

In 1941, accidents on the streets and highways cost 40,000 lives. In 1946, with travel 4 per cent higher, an even greater loss would have been sustained even if the prewar rate had continued.

FORTUNATELY, that did not happen. Beginning in May, 1946, the highway fatality rate showed a sharp and gratifying decline. Last year, the rate was 9.8 deaths per 100 million vehicle miles, compared with 12 in 1941. So far this year, the trend has continued definitely downward.

Measured against the black record of 1941, this means that at least 6500 lives were saved last year. We have won a major victory in the campaign against carelessness. For that result, the major share of the credit must go to the efficient and devoted efforts which were set in motion at the first Highway Safety Conference here in Washington in May, 1946.

This reduction in the accident rate offers heartening promise on what eventually can be achieved through the concerted effort of motorists and pedestrians, under the leadership of governmental agencies and with the support of organized groups of public-spirited citizens.

The job has been well started, but it is by no means done.

Last year, 33,500 men, women and children died as a result of highway accidents, and well over a million were injured. That is a tribute to inefficiency this Nation cannot afford to pay.

If those deaths had occurred at the same time in a single community, the whole world would have been profoundly shocked. Every resource of the United States would have been mobilized immediately to prevent the recurrence of such an awful tragedy.

THE challenge is no less urgent because it is less spectacular. We are dealing here with what amounts to a national disaster. The fact that most of the death and destruction could have been prevented only intensifies the tragic character of the problem.

The "action program" developed at the Highway Safety Conference of 1946 is a sound and workable program. It can and does get results. Now the task is to get more of that program applied by more of the States and more of the communities. I hope that your deliberations this week will direct principal attention to finding ways and means of achieving that goal.

The reports from the States indicate unusually good progress in the field of safety education, especially in the development of driver training courses by our high schools. More than two million young people reach the legal driving age each year in the United States. We certainly have an obligation to see that they receive the most adequate preparation possible for useful citizenship in a motor age.

Unfortunately, the driver license part of the program is not keeping pace. Since the 1946 safety conference, two additional States have enacted driver license laws, which leaves now only one State in the Union without such legislation. But uniformity is still lacking among the States. And in too many jurisdictions, as I have pointed out before, licensing laws are nothing more than revenue measures and their administration a travesty on public safety.

Moreover, the States report little or no progress during the last year in raising standards of motor vehicle administration.

This situation obviously cannot be permitted to continue indefinitely. A licensing law is a basic weapon in the war on accidents. Properly administered, it eliminates the dangerously unfit and the dangerously irresponsible from our streets and highways. It is vital to the protection of the vast majority of law-abiding motorists and pedestrians.

LAST year I said there was no desire on the part of the Federal Government to encroach upon State jurisdictions in this field, but that the Congress would not stand idly by in the face of a grievous national accident toll.

In the regulation of interstate commerce, in research and investigation, and in many other activities the Federal Government has direct concern with the problem of highway safety.

The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1944, for example, provides for the development jointly with the States of modern traffic arteries, both rural and urban, which will incorporate maximum safety into their design and construction. Improvements of this kind in the highway plant will make permanent and substantial contribution to accident prevention.

Since the "action program" was formulated last year, vigorous steps have been taken by nearly all the Federal agencies involved to carry it out in their own operations. Especially encouraging are the programs which have been undertaken for the intensive training of drivers.

MANY shortcomings, of course, still exist. But I am happy to report that progress is highly satisfactory, and that plans have been made to intensify these activities in the months ahead. They are fully coordinated through a Federal committee on highway safety in which 13 Federal agencies are now participating.

Three national committees were established in accordance with recommendations made by the 1946 conference. These committees suggested to me the desirability of calling this follow-up meeting, and I was most happy to act on their suggestion. The purpose of the meeting is to weigh the strength and the weakness of the current program, and to outline further steps which can be taken to speed the adoption of the "action program" by all jurisdictions.

I am confident that your work will be fruitful. I am confident that the American people will respond again, and wholeheartedly, to a renewed appeal from this conference for greater care and courtesy on the roads and streets.

In opening your deliberations, I join with you this morning in making that appeal.

IN THE INTEREST OF HIGHWAY SAFETY—President Harry Truman, arriving at the Interior Department Auditorium yesterday to open his second highway safety conference, is greeted by Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, Federal Works Administrator and conference chairman. The President, in praising the drop in traffic deaths, said "The job has been well started, but it is by no means done"

Epiphany Chapel Vicar to Retire From Ministry

The Rev. Francis Yarnall, vicar of Epiphany Episcopal Chapel, 230 C st. sw., will retire from the ministry after a 47-year career, it was learned last night.

His resignation at Epiphany Chapel, a mission of Epiphany Church, will be effective September 1. After that, he and Mrs. Yarnall will live in St. Petersburg, Fla. From 1922 to 1930, he was rector of St. John's Church at Tallahassee, Fla.

Mr. Yarnall, 77, has been associated with Epiphany Chapel 17 years. He was ordained in 1900 at the Pro-Cathedral in South Bethlehem, Pa.

Child Center Bill Up

A Senate-approved bill to extend Washington day care centers for another year to June 30, 1948, will be reviewed by a House District subcommittee in an open hearing at 10 a. m. today, in room 445 Old House Office Building.

800 Recreation Aides to Meet Today in Arlington

Nearly 800 professional and volunteer recreation leaders are expected to attend a three-day "Recreation Leaders Workshop" beginning today at 10 a. m. at the Arlington Recreation Center under sponsorship of five county Community Chest agencies and the school recreation department.

Instructions in story-telling and craftwork will be given from 10 a. m. to noon daily, while from 2 to 4 p. m. the subjects will include instruction in sports and games, trailcraft, naturecraft and collections. Evening sessions will be devoted to demonstrations of fishing, weaving, folk dancing and group singing.

The cooperative venture, first of its kind in Arlington, was planned to improve the county's recreation program, according to Boy Scout Field Executive Dean Longfellow.

'Progressives' In Arlington Seek Reforms

A 20-point program for County and State reform was announced today by the Progressive Democrats of Arlington, newly formed group of "antimachine Democrats."

The "PDA" is backing six Democrats described as liberal for nomination in the Democratic primary August 5.

Announcing its opposition to the poll tax and a proposed Virginia sales tax, the group also called for "a comprehensive program for Arlington County capital and school improvements."

It demanded "a thorough review of the appointive and nonjudicial powers of Virginia judges" to take the courts "out of partisan and factional politics."

It asked that County Court be conducted "in an orderly, decorous and humane manner befitting the dignity of a judicial tribunal." PDA's candidate for County Court judge is Attorney Clarence E. Hodges.

For Arlington County, the platform asked establishment of initiative, referendum, and recall statutes, and a merit or civil service system for county employes. Other planks included:

1. Establishment of modern regional penal institutions in place of the current crop of "antiquated jails."

2. A tenure system for Virginia school teachers.

3. A survey of the office of the commissioner of revenue (Arlington) to introduce "up to date procedures." James E. Rice, jr., is the group's candidate for the post.

4. A State-wide public health and hospitalization program, and completion of a program to rid Virginia rivers of pollution.

5. Revision of Virginia laws to make women eligible for jury duty.

6. Calling of a convention to revise the State's 1902 Constitution.

The PDA pledged itself to "the principle of Democratic constitutional government," and announced its opposition to "the totalitarian principles of communism and fascism."

Other group candidates are Frank L. Ball, jr., State Senate; Albert A. Carretta for House of Delegates; Malcolm D. Miller for Commonwealth's attorney, and Elwood Clements, unopposed for sheriff.

High Cost of Brides Dooms Rhinoceros to Single Life

Looks like Gunda is going to live alone and like it.

Gunda is the rhinoceros at Washington's Zoo.

Zoo Director William M. Mann said yesterday the price of potential mates for Gunda is pretty steep on the world market.

He likes to have his animals in pairs, but the last dealer's price he heard was about $10,000 f. o. b. Sumatra.

Gunda, a massive male, came to the Zoo about 11 years ago, Mann said. He was a gift from the government of Assam, India, but the local Zoo paid about $3000 to get him here. That included building a road to the pit where he had been trapped.

GUNDA
"I aint got nobody . . ."

It's the same story with flamingoes, Mann said. Their price in Egypt has gone from a pound apiece to 8 or 10 pounds.

Tapering-Off for Drunks Held Better Than Sudden Quitting

By The Associated Press

A 33-hour "tapering off" treatment for very sick drunks—featuring use of eight shots of watered-down whisky—was described yesterday by a Kansas doctor who said it could be administered in emergencies by laymen.

Dr. Z. N. Nason of Kansas City declared that while immediate withdrawal of all alcohol has been favored in such cases by many doctors, one important factor has been overlooked.

"For the alcoholic, the sudden withdrawal of alcohol frequently constitutes a severe shock," Nason said in Yale University's Quarterly Journal of Studies on Alcohol.

His method also calls for a tablespoonful of salt in water, given twice during the 33-hour period, and black coffee with sugar. Salt and sugar are required because of lowered levels of those substances in the drinker's body, resulting from failure to eat properly during his drinking bout.

But medical handling of an acutely ill alcoholic is mandatory if the patient is suffering from complications such as convulsions, delirium tremens or a condition in which the drunk temporarily loses all conception of time, place and who's who.

If a doctor is available, Nason's method calls for preliminary injections of dextrose (a sugar substance), plus some insulin—to control the utilization of sugar—and also a solution of vitamin B.

After that, the "detoxication process" is begun—the same as in the laymen's method. It consists of giving two ounces of whisky, diluted with six ounces of water every three hours for a total of five doses. Then, after a wait of six hours, the same amount of whisky, similarly diluted, is given and repeated every six hours for a total of three doses.

New Trial Denied Fitzpatrick, George town Student

A defense move for a new trial for Daniel J. Fitzpatrick, 22, Georgetown University student, who had been convicted of disorderly conduct charges following an incident May 29, yesterday was denied by Municipal Court Judge Nadine Gallagher.

The student had been found guilty of disorderly conduct by Judge Gallagher on June 10. At the same time the student was found not guilty of drunkenness.

Fitzpatrick's attorney, Edward B. Williams, argued that since the student was not guilty of drunkenness, Fitzpatrick was within his rights in protesting arrest on that charge to the officer, Pvt. James A. Stewart. It was Fitzpatrick's protests that led to the disorderly charge.

Stewart has since been suspended and faces a police trial board on charges of beating the student without provocation on June 4 in a separate incident involving the two.

Women Told War Has Left Europe Bitter

Miss Muriel Lester said yesterday that American women have a Christian duty to "save the minds, personalities and bodies of the human race."

Miss Lester

The only way we can do that, she told members of the Washington Council of Church Women, is by identifying ourselves with the peoples of Europe, through prayers and practical relief.

Miss Lester, founder of Kingsley Hall Settlement House project in London, said her observations during a recent tour of Europe showed her that Europeans "are bitter against life and resentful against God."

She said she found hatred against the former enemies decreasing in England. As an example, she told of a London newspaper carrying a story about the need of relief for German children. More than 60,000 Britons who read the story offered to aid the Germans with food and clothing, she stated.

Miss Lester spoke at International House, a Friends' project at 1825 R st. nw. She was introduced by Coleman Jennings. She autographed copies of her latest book, "It Occurred To Me." Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, past president of the Washington Council of Church Women, presided. Leslie Johnson, director of International House, spoke briefly.

Father Slays Two Children With Bat, Then Shoots Couple

PEGGY RUSSELL — CHRIS RUSSELL

Pouring out his story to police in Miami yesterday, Chris Russell, 59, tavern keeper, hysterically confessed killing his daughter, Peggy, 11, and son, John, 6, with a baseball bat

Miami, Fla., June 18 (AP).—A 59-year-old Greek restaurateur told police today he clubbed his two children to death last night with a baseball bat, cried himself to sleep over their bodies and this morning shot two neighbors who wanted to put his boy and girl in a home.

Detective Sergt. John L. Deas said Chris Russell, between sobs, blamed the deaths of Johnny Christo, 6, and Peggy Marea, 11, and the shooting of Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Wolfe on a former "no good" wife and a "double-crossing bunch of neighbors."

Deas said Russell killed his children by crushing in their skulls with a baseball bat in an apartment in back of his restaurant late last night, and this morning went next door to a real estate office and shot Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Wolfe twice each.

Wolfes in Critical Condition

The Wolfes were reported in critical condition at a hospital. They were to have appeared against Russell Friday on a complaint that he abused his children and was not a fit father.

Deas said that Russell's wife, Betty, called him by telephone from New York late today. He said it was learned she was now living in Norwalk, Conn., and that she was not yet divorced, as Russell had told police. She told Deas that the divorce suit was filed November 1 but that the final decree had not yet been issued.

Russell failed in an attempt to take his own life when he pointed a revolver at his temple and pulled the trigger on an empty chamber as detectives went to arrest him.

Deas said Russell, after shooting the Wolfes, fired into the business establishment of another neighbor, Mrs. B. Poppelauer, but the bullet went wild.

Story of Tragedy

The detective said Russell told him this story:

"They told me: 'Daddy, you have been double-crossed enough. They are going to take us away. We want to die. We don't want to leave you.'

"I don't want to live any more. I want to be buried with my children. Hang me right away. I'm better off dead."

Russell told Deas that neighbors, including the Wolfes, had signed a petition stating he was unfit to raise the children.

Night Motorist Got Records Of Lumber Firm, May Testifies

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

One dark night a couple of years ago a car pulled up to the home of A. J. (Little Jack) May in the hills of East Kentucky.

A man got out.

"My name is Mayo," he told Little Jack's wife—Mrs. Oval May—"and I have come for the lumber company records."

He drove away with canceled checks and books of account. Mrs. May noticed his car had a Letcher County, Ky., license.

And that—former Congressman A. J. May told the jury that is trying him for bribery and conspiracy yesterday—is the last that has been seen of the missing records of the Cumberland Lumber Co.

Alleged Gift of Garssons

Cumberland is the company that the Government claims was given to May by Henry and Murray Garsson, as part of more than $50,000 paid him for helping them get business when he was House Military chairman and they were piling up 70-odd million dollars worth of war orders. All three are on trial before Justice Henry W. Schweinhaut in the District Court.

May's nephew, who has the same name and is called Little Jack down in Kentucky, ran the lumber company for several months in 1944. He told the jury yesterday that his uncle hired him and paid him. Little Jack said he never knew for sure who owned the lumber company, but he was sure his uncle never claimed the firm was his. He could not recall that he told a grand jury here just the opposite.

Prosecutor William A. Paisley read from the grand jury record which showed Little Jack had said he knew the Congressman was at least a part owner because the Congressman told him so.

Reads Statements Given FBI

Paisley also read grand jury records and a statement Little Jack gave the FBI. Both times Little Jack said his uncle never gave him any money to carry on the lumber company while he was running it. The former Congressman himself told the juhy he gave his nephew $1500 in cash. Little Jack said yesterday that was right, too, that he got the $1500 all right, but not while he was manager. He got it the day he was given the job, he explained, and did not start managing until that night, or the next day.

Both Little Jack and his wife said she wrote checks for the company and kept the payroll book. They, too, said nothing has been seen of the missing records since the stranger drove away with them. They—and former Congressman May—said, too, that they knew a number of people named Mayo, but that none of them was the stranger.

Mrs. Oval May will be cross-examined this morning.

Regional Hospital Program Proposed for Rural Virginia

Richmond, Va., June 18 (AP).—A regionalized hospital program set up through the cooperation of the Medical College of Virginia and the University of Virginia hospitals was proposed today by MCV's president, Dr. W. T. Sanger, as a method of bringing better health to Virginia's rural communities.

Dr. Sanger's proposal came at an all-day session of the Virginia Council on Health and Medical Care which is launching a move for a better State-wide health program aimed at helping the rural localities.

About 200 persons from throughout the State attended the meeting in Baruch Auditorium of the Medical College.

Urging the regional hospital plan, Dr. Sanger assured "outside" financing at the start with the State gradually taking over the monetary responsibility.

Dr. Sanger warned that medical care "is dying at the crossroads" and urged the building of hospitals and health centers integrated with the two State medical schools as the only solution. He suggested that under the regional plan, which would preclude the establishment of well-equipped health centers, medical students in the upper classes would be sent to the communities as part of their education and in many cases would be willing to stay there.

The MCV president estimated that establishment of a State-wide health program would cost about 30 million dollars in capital outlay over a five-year period, part of which would come from the Federal Government under the Hill-Burton Act for construction of health facilities.

Following the conference, Dr. H. B. Mulholland of the University of Virginia Hospital and chairman of the council, appointed a committee headed by Dr. W. E. Garnett, rural sociologist for the Virginia Agricultural Station, Blacksburg, to draw up a definite legislative program based on the day's discussion. The next meeting of the council tentatively was set for July.

Earlier the council received a recommendation for establishment of a separate institution for the treatment of chronic alcoholics, to be financed out of the profits of the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control system.

The proposal, frequently aired during sessions of the General Assembly but without legislative results, was offered by Col. Charles R. Fenwick of Arlington, the council's legislative chairman, during an all-State conference at the Medical College of Virginia on health and medical care needs.

Coupled with the suggestion for the inebriates' institution was a call for a better-manned State hospital system. The State Hospital Board, governing body of the mental institutions, will go before Governor Tuck tomorrow with a program for alleviating the more pressing deficiencies.

Firemen Meet At Frostburg, Facing Debate

Frostburg, Md., June 18 (AP).—A lively debate over the method of naming an executive committee was in prospect today as members of the Maryland State Firemen's Association came to town in red wagons for their fifty-fifth annual convention.

A good part of the expected 1000 firemen, auxiliary women, and members of their families had arrived by the time the convention's first business session got under way this afternoon.

Irving Wallen Johnson of Glen Echo, publicity officer, said the Anne Arundel County delegation was ready with a resolution that would divide the State into seven districts. Each district would have an equal number of volunteer companies and each would elect a member of the executive committee.

Veto Caravan

Lobbying is an American institution that has become associated in the minds of many people with an illegitimate kind of pressure that is against the public interest. However, the majority of lobbyists do a valuable service by giving our legislators an opportunity to hear all sides of controversial questions before proceeding to enact legislation. The trade union members who have descended in force on Washington to bring pressure to bear on the President and members of Congress to prevent passage of the Taft-Hartley labor bill are unfortunately lobbyists of a different stripe. Their presence here is not designed to throw light on the nature of pending labor legislation. Congress has heard all the arguments for and against the chief proposals embodied in the labor bill. And after hearing them, both House and Senate voted overwhelmingly in favor of the bill. The chief purpose of the so-called veto caravan, therefore, is to overawe pro-labor bill representatives in Congress by causing them to fear the political consequences of a second vote for the labor bill in face of a possible presidential veto.

Any member of Congress favoring the labor bill who has the courage of his convictions will rightly resent this kind of would-be intimidation and is likely to be confirmed in his resolution to stand firm instead of being induced to reverse his vote. As for the President, the activities of the veto caravan are distinctly embarrassing. For while we do not in the least believe that the clamor of the lobbying union hosts will affect his decision, their presence would give added point to enemy charges of undue labor influence, if he should veto the labor bill.

Airline Survival

No technical explanation will atone for the death of the 50 persons aboard the Capital airliner that crashed in the Blue Ridge Mountains Friday. Nor will the investigation remedy the body blow that the recent disasters have dealt to air transport in general. There is no blinking the fact that our airlines are struggling for survival. Passenger revenues were just beginning to pick up after last winter's low. Now, during the season when travel should rise to a peak, patronage has leveled off again. Statistically it is possible to prove that despite the disasters of the last several weeks air travel is safer today than ever before. But statistics aren't very convincing to bereaved families or potential patrons dissuaded by the pictures of broken planes.

Consequently, if we wish to see a strong airline industry in this country, it becomes imperative that there be no more dilly-dallying with the air-safety program. In this respect the President's five-man inquiry board can do a valuable service in spotlighting just what has caused the delays in expanding research and applying some of the safety devices already known. Aside from the airlines' own deficiencies in pusning ahead with what they knew was necessary, doubtless much of the onus should fall on the Civil Aeronautics Administration which has insisted on a "go slow" policy. The CAA could use some new blood. But by the same token, part of the CAA's conservatism is attributable to the niggardly appropriations it has had in the past. This should be a sharp reminder for the House to restore the air-safety funds it so imprudently cut from next year's budget. The presidential board can help by concentrating on the need for congressional support, and then by insisting on more adequate inspection of airline safety practices by the CAA and by pressing for immediate adoption of safety aids which an all-out attack will make practicable.

There is danger, of course, in placing too much reliance on mechanical devices. They are no substitute for skill, nor will they compensate entirely for errors in judgment. But the facts developed by the Civil Aeronautics Board in the Blue Ridge crash—and we commend Chairman Landis' policy of making the hypotheses known promptly—indicate that this was clearly an instance in which an obstacle detector would have prevented the disaster. The pilot was perfectly within regulations in deviating from his original course to approach Washington over the Arcola, Va., range. Apparently he miscalculated his speed and lowered his altitude too soon. A radar-type device such as has been applied by Howard Hughes on TWA planes would have warned the pilot of the mountain ahead. But, although this use of radar is not a new discovery and although the installation cost is trifling compared with the cost of one crash, few planes today are so equipped.

The ill-informed talk in some quarters about grounding all DC-4 planes because of the accidents seems to us to becloud the issue. The DC-4 is a good plane and a sound plane which has been thoroughly tested. Two of the three recent crashes had nothing to do with the type of plane, and the third now seems to have been caused by faulty assembly rather than faulty design. What the crashes do indicate is, first, pilot error, and second, lack of sufficient safety precautions. There is no positive preventive for the first, but prompt steps to increase the number of safety aids can do a great deal to narrow the range of human fallibility. It should be evident by now that in dealing with a problem that so gravely affects the future of air transportation, the old-line conservative approach is not enough. There must be a radical remedy, and it must come quickly if public confidence is not to be shattered altogether.

Sheep's Clothing

House and Senate conferees have agreed on a mongrel measure for looking after our puny wool industry which would gouge the American consumer and promote corruption in the customs administration. Evidently the conferees were impressed by the objection that an import fee added to the present tariff would violate the letter of our existing trade agreements with a group of nations. Accordingly they adopted an alternative course of keeping out foreign wool, namely, the imposition of import quotas. Strange as it may seem, there is no specific ban on import quotas in any of our commercial pacts with foreign nations, though they would clearly violate their spirit. Doubtless nobody ever thought that the time would come when such a method of fighting the foreigner would be taken seriously. That this device has come out of the Eightieth Congress is no compliment to its sense of morality.

Let us think what might be expected to follow this novel method of propping up our wool growers at the consumers' expense. Congress would authorize the Administration to exclude 50 per cent of an import trade that is now four times our domestic clip. What yardstick would the administrators pick? The easiest and doubtless the only practicable way would be to shut the ports to foreign wool as soon as the quota had been attained. That would start a race on the part of foreign suppliers to get their stuff into America. Clearly the factor of distance alone would promote discrimination and ill-will. But it is the opening for graft on a grand scale that is the most dismaying thing about an import quota system. Wool is such an important item in the economy of Australia, New Zealand, Argentina and Uruguay that they would do everything they could to obtain import permits. It is irresponsible of Congress to subject the customs administration to this temptation.

One import quota, of course, would deserve another. If this new method of fleecing the consumer succeeds, then we would have a line of sick and uneconomic industries buttonholing Congress for similar protection. The prospective holdup should arouse the consumer. Already he is paying through the nose for his woolen goods This new bill would subject him to another steal of monstrous proportions. It might seem surprising that the industry which finds such favor in the eyes of Congress is wool. Its product is worth only 120 million dollars, or much less than one-thousandth of the national income. But wool, like silver, is well distributed, and 23 States (or, better put, 46 Senators) have a vested interest in it. And other States might not be averse to going along with the wool States in the hope that with the introduction of this new type of windfall from the public trough they might get theirs. One good turn always has earned another in tariff politics.

We have not discussed the international implications of this opening gun in the congressional declaration of economic war. The Geneva conference on trade agreements might as well close up shop if the wool bill should be enacted. What our representatives are trying to do there is to establish economic peace. But the wool bill means economic war. It is a new technique in import restrictions which would persuade other nations to copy our example, with disastrous results on world and American trade. Our representatives also are trying to find ways and means of helping foreigners earn the dollars wherewith to buy our goods. The problem of the dollar shortage has now become a crisis of the first magnitude engaging the full-time attention of Secretary Marshall. But the wool bill would close an avenue for earning dollars and at the same time for aiding the American consumer. It thus flies in the face of our national interest. Cannot the national well-being make any dent at all upon men obsessed with selfish interests? The wool bill is the year's prize example of lunatic exploitation of the American consumer and the foreign supplier.

Strike Emergencies

Doubtless everyone hopes that the maritime strike will be settled speedily and peacefully. If it should not be, however, it may become the first strike with which President Truman has to deal under the Taft-Hartley bill, assuming that this measure will become law. Certainly a prolonged tie-up of shipping would imperil the national health and safety. Not only that, it would critically interfere with Secretary Marshall's reconstruction policy in Europe. We do not think such a strike could be long endured without invoking the "national emergencies" section of the Taft-Hartley bill which authorizes the President to appoint a fact-finding board and, upon receiving its report, to seek an injunction against the strike or lockout.

This part of the bill is frankly experimental. Under it the President could do no more than halt a strike for 80 days and using the findings of his board of inquiry as a basis, bring public pressure upon the parties to effect a settlement. If either was recalcitrant, the injunction would have to be dissolved and the whole mess turned over to Congress for some possible emergency action. Mr. Truman is likely to find this a weak reed on which to lean if he is called upon to meet emergencies resulting from the paralysis of shipping, coal mining or any other essential industries.

Should the President veto the bill, however, he might be left facing the possibility of recurrent crises with no real authority to meet them. In such an event a seriously crippling strike of national scope would necessitate extraordinary legislation. A bill passed in such circumstances would undoubtedly be far more drastic than the present Taft-Hartley measure. Indeed, President Truman himself recommended far more drastic provisions than any contained in the present bill when the railway brotherhoods tied up train service shortly after the end of the war.

We think it is more probable that if the bill is vetoed the veto will be overridden. That would leave President Truman the unenviable duty of invoking, in any major strike emergency that might arise, an act that he had rejected. Failure of the act to produce the desired results, under these circumstances, would certainly be attributed to bias and ineffectiveness in its administration. The country would thus be dealing with national emergencies, as with labor relations in general, in an atmosphere supercharged with politics. The risks of such a course seem to us so great as wholly to overshadow any shortcomings in the bill before the President.

Epilogue

We were unable to observe Monday any evidence of the "riot and insurreetion" anticipated by the Anti-Communist Association if Mr. Wallace were allowed to speak his piece from a barge belonging to the United States Government. Some time before the meeting at the Watergate, Judge Proctor of the United States District Court had dismissed a plea by representatives of the Anti-Communist Association that Secretary Krug be enjoined from permitting a public park to be used for such a purpose. The judge took the very proper ground that it was not a matter in which the courts should intervene.

The Anti-Communist Association appears to have contended first of all that Mr. Wallace ought not to have been allowed to use Government property to attack the policies of the Government, although this of course is something that occurs almost every day at the Capitol, and is indeed deemed quite necessary to the functioning of constitutional government. The association, as it seems to us, also made the error of not distinguishing between the Government as the Administration and the Government as the people. It is not to the Administration but to the people that the public parks belong. Now it is, under our constitutional theory, precisely to the sovereign people that both the Administration and Mr. Wallace are carrying their respective cases. And presumably, if the people are to make an intelligent judgment between them, it must hear as fully as possible from both sides.

Another point made in the application for the injunction is that Mr. Wallace is known to have consorted with Communists here and abroad, and also the point that the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, which sponsored the meeting and to which a permit was issued, is under Communist control. It seems to us that neither point, if true, is in any way relevant. Indeed, the only point that might have been relevant in the circumstances was whether the Watergate is, after all, an appropriate place for political meetings of any sort.

But to suppose that American institutions can be knocked over by a mere breath from Mr. Wallace is to say that these institutions are already moribund. For the principle of free spech which has given vitality to them all is the one that the Anti-Communist Association was seeking to repudiate.

NEGRO SPIRITUAL

They were chained, they were saved,
music their deliverer.
They were beaten, spirits tamed,
music their deliverer.

We, the arrogant light races, grasping what our hands will get us, ruthless, snakelike striking;
we in our complacence thinking
we're the arm of star and atom; greedy, vicious, riding
to our own destruction.
Where's the song will ease our bosoms in the hour we find our level?

They were tricked, they were cheated,
music their deliverer,
killed in riots, hung on trees,
music their deliverer.

"School Aid"

Your June 12 editorial, "School Aid," claims that the Thomas-Hill-Taft bill is strictly a "States' rights bill" and that no "strings are attached to the Federal contributions. May I call your attention to the following obvious Federal controls in the bill:

(1) The States may not use Federal funds for erecting school buildings; (2) The States must grant a pro rata share of Federal funds to schools of minority races; (3) within four years after the bill's enactment, every school district must spend at least $50 per child in average daily attendance at the public schools; (4) States spending less than $120 per child or less than 2 per cent of their annual income payments for public education will be penalized by a reduction of their Federal allotments; (5) a State may not spend any Federal money for children in nonpublic schools unless it declares that these schools are "a part of the program of public education within the State."

Apparently, this last control (No. 5) will make it impossible for the States to use Federal funds for nonpublic schools, even for essential services to the children in these schools. I should have greater respect for The Post were it to say frankly that it favors this control because, as its editorial said, "it is a bad idea to give public funds to nonpublic schools."

The Post cannot have it both ways. If the States are to be kept fully free from Federal domination, they must be free to distribute their funds for any purpose, e.g., for buildings, and in any manner, e.g., with most of the funds going to city school systems, and finally, the States should be allowed to use the Federal funds as they please in aid of nonpublic schools.

If, however, the Federal Government is to retain administrative control (as contrasted with the control of the selection of teachers, curriculum, etc.) then the Federal Government must require the States to establish a program of State-wide equalization, to deal fairly with schools for minority races, and to avoid any reduction of local and State expenditures for public education. Consistently, therefore, the Federal Government must decide for itself as to whether the States will be required to use Federal funds for nonpublic schools.

Administrators of most nonpublic schools will not be deceived by the Taft bill's ambiguous provision presumably permitting the States to make nonpublic schools a part of their program of public education. In any event, these schools will be unwilling to sacrifice their identity as nonpublic schools in return for a few crumbs of Federal aid.

"At Expense of Health"

You are to be commended for your interest shown in your editorial of June 11 in the immediate contruction of a new pediatric building at Gallinger Municipal Hospital.

Congress recognized this need as being great in 1945 and consequently appropriated funds for its construction. These funds are still unused because increased building costs have made the amount appropriated inadequate.

The children in the present pediatric ward are crowded into an area that is dark and dreary; ventilation is so poor that heat exhaustion has occurred among some patients. This unit averages a 90 per cent occupancy, extra beds and cribs of 10 being crowded in to bring the occupancy well over 100 per cent. This children's unit is in a makeshift location on part of the second floor of the psychiatric building where mentally ill patients are hospitalized!

A children's clinic is immediately adjacent to the patients' rooms. There are 8,000 visits a year to this clinic. Actually the admitting room for the unit and the clinic are the same, since so many of the patients are brought to the clinic seeking admission to the hospital.

Facilities are so poor and the unit so crowded that protection from communicable diseases and isolation technique are practically impossible.

The presence of vermin in this unit has been practically erased as a result of the ingenuity of the hospital administration and constant control procedures. However, before this had been accomplished, even the Saturday Evening Post told the story Nation-wide of how the legs of the cribs had to be placed in basins of insecticide to keep cockroaches from crawling on these child patients!

Supplementary funds must be provided for the construction of this new building which has already been approved by Congress and the D. C. Commissioners.

Director of Volunteers, Gallinger Hospital.

"Red" Label

The Post of June 15 stated that the House Committee on Un-American Activities charges that the Washington Committee of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare is a "red" organization. The House committee sophistically arrives at that conclusion because some of the conference members belong to other groups which it avers are "red;" because some conference members seem at some time to have met a Communist; and because the conference is stated to have advocated some policies which the Communist Party has not found displeasing.

Following that line of reasoning: if an organization is "red" because some of its members are called (but not proved) "red," then, indubitably, all the rest of the members must be "red" because they belong to an organization which, without any proof, has been called "red." Since I belong to the Southern Conference, I believe that I, too, should rate being tagged "red" by Mr. Thomas' crusaders.

This is very gratifying because I contend that the time has come when no citizen of moral or intellectual integrity can afford not to be labeled "red" by the inquisitionists of the House Un-American Committee. I should like to have this letter published so that I may publicly claim that honor.

Showdown With Russia

The criminal assault on Hungary by the Soviet Union is not only the assassination of democracy but a brutal blow against the United Nations. It is a bold avowal of the plan to create a Communist Federation of Europe. Incidentally it is a diabolical revenge for the fiasco of the first Bolshevist revolution in Hungary which I personally witnessed in 1919.

Austria and Czechoslovakia again, as in the case of the Nazis, are apparently doomed to lose their independence, together with Hungary, Romania, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Albania, Poland, Latvia, Esthonia, and Lithuania. Heroic little Finland cannot be expected to hold out much longer. Eastern Germany is now being rapidly "democratized" according to the Communist conception of democracy. And now Greece and Turkey can only be saved from a similar fate by the support which the United States may be willing and able to furnish.

The crisis is now fully upon us. The time for a forthright decision and determined action has arrived. The inevitable showdown in our relations with Russia has long been overdue. The momentous promulgation of the Truman doctrine in March was the prelude to this showdown. It now remains to be seen whether it was the declaration of a well thought out policy or merely a rhetorical gesture.

A showdown does not mean war. The Soviet Union has every reason to avoid a disastrous war so long as it can accomplish its sinister purposes by the actual occupation or sabotage by fifth columnists of the western democracies. No sane or patriotic American could ever contemplate or justify resort to war except in sheer defense.

What then does a showdown mean? First of all it means that we have the honesty and the courage to carry out our international responsibilities without fear of consequences. Fear is always a bad counsellor, and the fear of war paralyzes the will.

A showdown means the manful acceptance of the ugly and inescapable facts of the world situation, the refusal to indulge in naive illusions, and the abandonment of further futile appeasements such as the incredible one of Trieste.

A showdown means that the time has come when we can no longer carry on with patience the fruitless discussions with the Soviet Union, either within or outside the United Nations organization. These discussion since the end of the war have served only the foul purposes of Communist propaganda while affording the time needed to consummate the creation of the Communist Federation of Europe.

A showdown might compel, though reluctantly, the termination of formal diplomatic relations with Moscow. The Soviet Union has never accepted the established system of international law but has cynically availed itself of the right of recognition and diplomatic immunities in order to foment revolution in those "capitalistic democracies" which it denounces as its natural enemies.

A showdown should logically mean that we cannot much longer be restrained by the obstructionist tactics of Moscow from acting effectively to save the hungry and despairing peoples of Western Europe from the fate of the peoples of Eastern Europe. Great Britain and the United States have already ignored the bitter opposition of Russia to the economic unification of the British and American zones of occupation in Germany. Other decisions of a more drastic and significant nature may be expected to follow rapidly if we are to prevent the achievement of the Communist Federation of Europe.

A Communist Party in any land is in no strict sense a political party that aims to respect the democratic processes. Its purpose is not peaceful but the bringing about of revolution by sabotage and violence. As such, a Communist Party should be outlawed like pirates as hostes humanis. Communists should never be permitted—sentimental theorists to the contrary nothwithstanding—to enjoy freedom in order to destroy freedom.

The American people have the right to hear the whole unpleasant truth from President Truman, Secretary Marshall, and the leaders in Congress. We cannot honorably sacrifice the fruits of victory of the late war. We cannot risk the sacrifices of our national security by failing do all in our power to guarantee international security.

Global Family Problems

By Malvina Lindsay

Home Life Crisis

THROUGH MUCH of the world the John Doe family is causing lots of gossip and national worry. John is home from war, tired and disillusioned. His wife must work outside the home to help pay inflation's bills. She is constantly exhausted and irritable. The children are getting into trouble. The family lives in turmoil in crowded, uncomfortable quarters. The parents are talking divorce.

Postwar problems of the Doe families of 40 countries will be discussed at the first World Congress for the Family and Population in Paris next week. This was called by France's National Union of Family Associations, which developed in prewar days out of the nation's zealous efforts to strengthen its family life.

This conference is official recognition that the family, as Jan Christian Smuts said of humanity, has struck its tents and is on the march; that it is seeking new camping grounds and new methods of camping. American response to this is the planning, now under way, for a White House Family Conference in 1948.

THOSE who regard any change as fearsome are wailing that the family is again going to the dogs. The more hopeful believe it is only experiencing the inevitable after-effects of war, and adjusting itself to survival in a new era.

Despite the world boom in divorce and juvenile misconduct, a wave of concern for family welfare is sweeping most countries. The new French constitution puts the family at the top of its preamble, thus: "The nation assures the individual and family of conditions necessary to their development. It guarantees to all, and especially the child, the mother and the old worker, health protection, material security, rest and leisure time."

Upsets and sufferings of war have emphasized anew the value of normal home life. Yet there is increasing realization that this cannot be had in precisely the good old-fashioned way. One of the big changes that has come to war-torn countries is that many women must be family heads—must be wage earners, also both fathers and mothers to children. Then women with husbands are having to work increasingly out of the home in most countries, including the United States.

How such women can be helped will be discussed at the World Family Congress. In France and other European countries there is increasing emphasis on state aid to make it possible for mothers of young children to remain in the home. In 1932 France instituted compulsory family allowances—increases in wages in proportion to the number of children. In 1939 a family code was adopted extending this provision.

COMMUNITY services for working mothers also will figure in the congress discussions. French family associations have long been active in this field, providing both voluntary and paid help in homes in time of sickness and other emergencies.

Other family problems the world faces are lack of housing, growth of divorce and abortions, low standards of living, increased tensions resulting from the drift from rural to city life, housework difficulties in a world of vanishing domestic help.

While this country does not have to any great extent widowed heads of families, it yet is concerned with prevailing matriarchal control. Hence there is now widespread effort to prepare boys, and induce men to function more actively as fathers.

For all the postwar difficulties marriage and family life throughout the world face, there are signs that point to a happier future for them. One is the great interest of governments, schools, churches, and more recently of science, in improving them. Another is the application of scientific knowledge to their problems. These developments, of which the Paris conference is one expression, promise that the family by 1960 will once more have found its demise, like Mark Twain's, greatly exaggerated.

"Federal Jobholders"

May I take the opportunity to express my wholehearted concurrence with your editorial of June 9 "Federal Jobholders" in which you advocate a detailed study of each Government department before further reductions in personnel are made.

Those who are to undertake such a study in the future will do well to bear in mind the nature of the favorite device used by some Government departments to increase their personnel beyond the limits dictated by considerations of efficiency and economy. I refer to the practice of overspecialization i.e. dividing the organization into an excessive number of branches.

In private business specialization is practiced only to the extent demanded by the nature of the task and to a degree consistent with economy and efficiency. In Government organization a specialization is often used as a device for building "little empires." A purchasing department of a Government establishment, for example, may consist of a section for soliciting bids, a section for examining bids, a section for placing orders, a section for following up orders, a section for certifying bills for payment, etc. You may find, in short, many small groups, each perhaps only partially occupied, while the complete task of economical and expeditious purchasing of supplies is neglected. A Government technical organization may consist of several practically independent laboratories in cases where a truly unified structure would be more economical as well as more effective. J. S. H.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Voice Of The Vatican

TWICE WITHIN the past week the newspaper of the Vatican, L'Osservatore Romano, has discussed the relations between the United States and the Soviet Union. The full texts of these two editorials are not yet available over here. But excerpts are available and there are news reports from Rome which state that the editorials were written by the chief editor, Count Guiseppe della Torre, at the suggestion of Pope Pius, and that "in Vatican circles" the arguments were said "to reflect the Pope's anxiety over the increasing tenseness between Washington and Moscow."

Lippmann

The significance of these editorials, lies in the fact that "despite the traditionally strong anti-Communist stand" of the Vatican, they take a position of "complete impartiality and realism" in the Russian-American conflict, admonish both Moscow and Washington to be more "objective," to avoid an ideological struggle which could lead only to war, and to seek practical compromises.

THE WARNING and the advice from the Vatican came at a time when Mr. Bevin and M. Bidault have been meeting in Paris in response to Secretary Marshall's speech at Harvard. Their first concern has been with an aspect of the question which the Vatican's newspaper is discussing. The immediate question for them is whether they can cooperate with us and not break irreparably with Russia. It is most important that all who make and administer our foreign policy, and that all who discuss it, should see clearly this dilemma of the Europeans—which is the occasion for the Vatican's warning and is a principal subject matter in the Bevin-Bidault conversations.

All the leading countries of Europe, including many within the Russian orbit, are deeply opposed to the expansion and the domination of Russia. But none of them is prepared to accept American leadership in an anti-Communist coalition. And they have come to believe that this is the intent of the so-called Truman Doctrine, and of its progenitor, Mr. Churchill's Fulton speech.

During the past year reaction and resistance have been growing in Europe to any policy which would make Europe the stakes of Soviet-American competition, and the continent the battlefield of an ideological and an international war.

WE HAVE BEEN, I believe, curiously blind to this phenomenon, and have failed to appreciate its historical importance. The fact is that Europe is rising again, and is determined and is destined to align itself neither with Russia as she is now nor with America, as we have in this past year appeared to be. This is not, as so many of us imagine, the opinion exclusively of the left and of the fellow travelers. The idea that the European states, including Britain, should mediate between Russia and America and prevent a war, was put forward for the British commonwealth and empire by Prime Minister Smuts last June, by General de Gaulle in France last July, in effect by Mr. Churchill in his more recent speeches about the United States of Europe, and now by the Vatican newspaper. When President Truman was in Ottawa recently, he seems to have been talked to on this subject by the Canadians.

It goes without saying that on the continent almost any leader of a labor party, a Socialist party, or a popular Catholic party, and of an ordinary liberal party, dreads and resists being placed in the position where in order to retain the good will of this country he must be uncompromising and irreconcilable with the Soviets. For the Europeans do not wish to be ground between the upper and the nether millstones.

THE QUESTION now is whether the Marshall proposals are a revision of the "Truman Doctrine." To answer that question sincerely would greatly improve the likelihood of their success abroad. Yet it must be admitted that a sincere answer may cause some embarrassment within the Administration here at home.

The fact is that the Truman Doctrine was a hasty and ill-considered improvisation, designed to meet an emergency for which the State Department was not prepared, and propounded in a form which, whatever its effects elsewhere, was deemed most likely to win quick support in Congress. The Marshall plan is a considered attempt to supersede the crudities and the unworkable elements of the Truman Doctrine—and to place this country behind a constructive settlement rather than at the head of an ideological crusade.

THE SOONER we admit this, the more frankly we say it, the sooner and the more surely we shall regain what we have been losing—the confidence of the great masses of the people who are too civilized and too proud to be the satellites of Russia or the clients of the United States.

Neither the exhibition of our military power nor the spending of money can restore that popular confidence. We shall have also to prove to mankind that our influence and power are the instruments of statesmanship, which seeks peace, and the rehabilitation of this shattered world, and the settlement of the secular issues that divide it.

Washington Calling

Build-Up For Wallace

IF HENRY Wallace is built up into a political hero, he will owe a considerable debt to the stupidity of those who profess to oppose everything Wallace stands for. They seem determined to advertise him as a martyr in the cause of peace.

The House Un-American Activities Committee rarely fails to chip in its free publicity build-up. In connection with Wallace's appearance in Washington, the committee went so far as to suggest a Gestapo-like surveillance of the audience, apparently in the expectation of frightening away timid Government employes. Americans will always react against such tactics.

Unless the opposition insists on handing it to him on a silver platter, Wallace is not likely to develop any very substantial political following. In his barnstorming tour of Europe and the United States, he has drawn large audiences but he has not attracted any conspicuous political recruits.

THE EFFECT of his tour of Great Britain, insofar as it was meant to strengthen left-wing opposition within the Labor Party, seems to have been largely negative. Jennie Lee, Labor member of Parliament and wife of Aneurin Bevan, Minister of Health in the Atlee cabinet, criticized Wallace in an editorial in the left-wing London Tribune, of which she is co-editor. The editorial noted that leading New Dealers and labor leaders in this country are not among Wallace's followers.

"Though mixed in character," she wrote, "most influential is Lee Pressman, who did all in his power, before Pearl Harbor, to organize CIO opposition to Roosevelt's lend-lease to Britain. It was only when Russia was brought into the war that his views changed, and up to the moment he signed the message (which Wallace took to England) I can find no evidence of any spirit of friendship toward post-war Britain in Mr. Pressman's activities.

"On the other hand, few of the leading trade-unionists who took an active anti-Fascist stand from the very beginning of the war and have recently striven to picture the virtues as well as the shortcomings of Labor Britain, give any sign they accept Mr. Wallace as their leader."

In his Washington speech, Wallace's only reference to Britain was as one of the powers that had attempted after World War I to put down communism by arming Russia's neighbors. In his speeches in England, Wallace talked about American imperialism and the prime importance of Britain's role as peacemaker with the Soviet Union.

In the course of his tour of this country, in only two instances did Wallace have any real political backing. In Minnesota, his appearance was sponsored by the Democratic-Farmer Labor Party. But the most dynamic figure in the D-FL and their only conspicuous vote-getter today, Mayor Hubert H. Humphrey of Minneapolis, had nothing to do with Wallace's appearance.

IN SOUTHERN California, Wallace had the substantial backing of the left-wing of the Democratic Party. His chief sponsor in California is former State Attorney General Robert W. Kenny, who was badly defeated for the Governorship when Earl Warren last year won nomination in both the Republican and Democratic primaries. The split in the Democratic Party in California is so bitter that the Republicans seem almost certain to carry the State next year.

Evidence accumulates that in the State of Washington Wallace's appearance in behalf of a Democrat who straddled the foreign issue helped to elect a Republican who favored the Truman doctrine. That was in the special congressional election in the Third District, where in the primaries the Democrats got twice as many votes as the Republicans.

When he criticizes the negative aspects of the Truman doctrine, Wallace is on sound ground. Yet, in his Washington speech, he said nothing at all about Secretary of State Marshall's constructive program for Europe. When he talks of the deep desire of peoples everywhere for peace, he reflects a world-wide longing. In his easy "solutions," he conveniently ignores all the grim facts of the past two years.

The effort to suppress or intimidate Wallace will only add to his following. We as a people will always resent being treated like children who are not old enough to distinguish between true criticism and false.

The First Steps

By Barnet Nover

Action On The Marshall Plan

AFTER A CURIOUSLY hesitant start, sentiment in favor of the Marshall plan is sweeping western Europe like a prairie fire.

Nobody is underestimating either the political or the economic difficulties that stand in the way of the plan's execution.

NOVER

These difficulties are inherent in the nature of the task which the American Secretary of State has urged the nations of Europe to undertake with the assistance of this country.

The rebuilding of Europe's economic life, of its industrial plant, its communications, its power resources, its agriculture, is bound to be a long, slow process under the best circumstances. With Europe split in two and the lands under Soviet domination almost completely cut off from the free nations of the West the work of rehabilitation will be bedeviled by complications at every turn.

Yet Europe's leaders realize that it is now or never for their countries. Either the nations of the continent make a concerted effort to lift themselves out of the slough of despondency or they sink into chaos.

ALREADY, at the meeting held in Paris between Foreign Secretary Bevin of Great Britain and Premier Ramadier and Foreign Minister Bidault of France the first steps toward the carrying out of the Marshall plan have been taken.

It was then agreed that the two nations would convoke a European economic commission to serve as a directing and operating agency for European recovery. According to the Paris announcement, that new body will be "within the framework" of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe which recently met at Geneva and is to resume its deliberations early next month.

IN TAKING this particular step Great Britain and France have gone a long way to remove Russian suspicions of the Marshall plan, if Russia is willing to have those suspicions removed.

The Russian government, judged by a recent outburst in Pravda, is highly critical of the Marshall plan. It is, said that newspaper recently, a "plan of political pressure with the help of dollars, a plan of interference in the internal affairs" of European countries.

Pursuing a line of argument familiar to the Soviet public through frequent repetition, Pravda also insists that the Marshall plan represents a frantic attempt by the United States to save itself from the imminent danger of an economic crisis now "closing in upon America."

AT THE SAME TIME, however, Russia and her satellites have been participating in the work of the Economic Commission for Europe which was created by the United Nations Economic and Social Council last March.

Despite very strong original opposition to this body by the Soviet, which resulted in a watering down of its terms of reference, reports from Geneva indicate that during its recent meetings the Russian group was most cooperative.

This may be because the E. C. E.'s labors were only preliminary. The Russian attitude may also have been the result of the realization that an obstructionist attitude would be resented by the peoples of Europe who are prepared to grasp at any straw to save themselves from the economic chaos that threatens them.

SINCE the British and French proposal is to make use of the E. C. E. as one of the chief instruments of continental cooperation, the Russians cannot say of it, as they have been saying of the Marshall plan, that it is directed against them.

In other words, even if Moscow has no desire whatever to lift a finger to help in the task of European rehabilitation since chaos plays into its hands, it may, in the long run, have at least nominally to go along with Great Britain and France in the move those countries have just made. Certainly that is what certain of Russia's principal satellites, notably Czechoslovakia and Poland, whose economy is geared to that of the West, would want her to do.

In the meantime, the enthusiasm shown in such countries as Great Britain, the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy and France for the Marshall plan is in itself proof of the fact that while Europe is down it is not out.

In suggesting to the nations of Europe that they will get help from the United States only and to the extent that they help themselves General Marshall has started something which not even the men in the Kremlin, masters of obstructionism though they are, can stop.

Senator Kilgore Hits Secrecy Surrounding Trial of Little

By The Associated Press

Senator Kilgore (D., W.Va.,) said yesterday the acquittal of Lieut. Comdr. Edward N. Little at a secret court-martial here "demonstrates a new for a complete congressional investigation of the entire Army and Navy court-martial system."

The regular Navy officer was cleared Tuesday of charges that he had mistreated fellow Americans while acting as company commander in a Japanese prison camp.

The 97-day trial was secret at Commander Little's request.

"The secrecy of that trial is contrary to our concept of justice," Kilgore told newsmen. "It goes back to the days of the star chamber trials of the Dark Ages."

The Navy said yesterday that in the court-martial, 38 of his one-time fellow prisoners of war testified for the prosecution and 37 of them testified for the defense.

All witnesses heard were at one time in the camp, Commander Robert Jackson, Navy press officer, told reporters. He said three of the defense witnesses came to Washington voluntarily after reading of the case in the newspapers.

The Navy did not disclose any of their testimony.

Representative O'Toole (D., N. Y.) had announced that he will write to the Secretary of the Navy asking that all evidence and the minutes of the court be turned over to Congress.

"It seems to me," O'Toole told reporters, "that the case has aroused enough public interest to warrant a study."

Anti-Discrimination Act Urged By Reuther to Aid Minorities

Walter P. Reuther, president of the CIO United Auto Workers, said yesterday a Federal antidiscrimination law is the only way to guarantee "full and equal opportunity for the minorities of this Nation."

He declared passage of a pending bill which would bar employment discrimination for reasons of race or creed "would represent a victory for the democratic conscience."

In a statement prepared for delivery to a Senate welfare subcommittee, Reuther added:

"The phrase, 'the right to work,' will remain a cynical and meaningless shibboleth as long as a Negro, Jew, Catholic, or any other minority group worker suffers the indignity of economic ostracism because of race, creed, color or national origin."

The subcommittee is considering a measure by Senator Ives (R., N. Y.) and others, patterned by a New York State law, to set up a permanent fair employment practices commission.

"The Negro has experienced the quick erosion of his wartime gains," Reuther said, "and today again, as in the days before the promulgation of the Four Freedoms, he represents the unwanted tenth in a country whose politicians never tire of reminding us of America's endless frontiers of opportunity . . ."

Reuther said nonwhites have borne the brunt of postwar unemployment, citing Census Bureau figures to show that unemployment among whites increased one and a half times from July, 1945, to April, 1947, while that among nonwhites more than tripled.

Germans Fleeing Red Zone Report Uranium Mining

Munich, Germany, June 18 (U.P.). Thousands of Germans were reported today to be fleeing from the Russian zone into the American and British occupied areas and several of the border-jumpers were quoted that they were afraid of being drafted to work in Russian uranium mines.

The clerk of the military government summary court at which several of the illegal immigrants were tried quoted one defendant as saying "a uranium mine was opened near Annaberg in the Russian zone and men were taken from their homes in the middle of the night and told they are going to work in the mine."

Disclosure of the large-scale border-jumping was made tonight by Bavarian Refugee Commissioner Wolfgang Jaenicke. Jaenicke said 2000 German males had crossed the border between June 5 and 10 and crossings were now reported to have reached 1000 daily. He blamed the increase on a recent Russian order to register all former German soldiers between 18 and 40.

Dr. Baker Heads D. C. Board of Optometry

Dr. George A. Baker, 615 14th st. nw., was recently elected president of the District Board of Optometry, it was announced yesterday. He succeeds Dr. Luther Dicus, 1700 N. Oak st., Arlington.

At the same meeting, Dr. Rex Sheley, 1342 F st. nw., was elected vice president, and Dr. Lewis H. Kraskin, with offices in the Washington Loan & Trust Building, was reelected secretary-treasurer. July 5 Proclaimed Holiday in Virginia

Richmond, Va., June 18 (AP).—Governor Tuck today proclaimed July 5 a full "legal holiday" in Virginia.

The Governor said he had received many requests from bankers and merchants throughout the State to make the Saturday an official day off, and since most retail establishments will be closed anyway, the Governor said he felt a "legal holiday" would be justified.

All-Time High Industry Pay, Housing Boom Are Reported

By the United Press

The Labor Department said yesterday in an optimistic report on the Nation's economic outlook that weekly earnings in industry have reached an all-time high, housing construction is booming to a post-war peak and there is no sign of a slump in the making.

"There is nothing in the current picture to indicate any general downtrend or recession," said Ewan Clague, director of the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

He refused to rule out the possibility of a recession later on, but he said everything at present points to a continued high rate of employment and business activity.

He said average weekly earnings in manufacturing hit a record of $48.86 in May, on the basis of preliminary reports, and that 69,000 new housing units were started last month, considerably more than had been expected and more than in any previous month since the war.

He said the building boom to meet the country's housing needs and the full effects of the recent 15-cents-an-hour wage increases granted in basic industries are "still in the future."

"The full benefits of these things are still to be felt," he told a press conference.

He said the economic position at present is "on a high level—a plateau—with plenty of strength." He added that fewer than two million people were unemployed last month, which equals the low mark reached last fall.

Schacht Formulates German Economic Plan, Clay Admits

Frankfurt, Germany, June 18 (U.P.)—Gen. Lucius D. Clay confirmed a report today that Hjalmar Schacht, erstwhile president of the Reichsbank, had a secret plan for restoring Germany's economy and had been taken out of an internment camp temporarily so he could be questioned.

But Clay, the American military governor, made it clear that he personally was not interested in any of Schacht's ideas. He said he had "no intention of using Dr. Schacht to point the way out."

Clay said Schacht had been transferred from the Ludgwigsburg internment camp "to intelligence agencies." After "certain questioning," Clay said, Schacht will be returned to Ludwigsburg to serve out the eight-year term a Stuttgart denazification court imposed upon him five weeks ago for his high Nazi affiliations.

Authorities refused to say exactly what they were asking Schacht about. They would say only that they were "filling in some hazy spots" in the history of the internal workings of the Nazi regime.

Mother Undergoes Lie Tests In Strangling of Her Baby

Insists Intruder Killed Child and Tried to Attack Her

Chicago, June 18 (U.P.)—A baby was strangled in his crib today and police gave his attractive mother, Mrs. Betty Barrows, 24, lie detector tests. She said a marauder killed the babe and tried to attack her.

Police said Mrs. Barrows was in a state of shock and first tests were "inconclusive." She will be given additional tests tomorrow.

Mrs. Barrows, a brunette divorced from her first husband who was the baby's father, and estranged a few weeks ago from her second, said the baby died in his crib in her bedroom early today while she slept a few feet away. The baby, Gerald Drazin, would have been 3 years old next month.

Mrs. Barrows lives in a second floor apartment with her mother, Mrs. Rose Black, and her stepfather, Roy Black. The Blacks were sleeping in an adjoining room when they heard Mrs. Barrows scream.

Mrs. Barrows told police she was awakened by a noise. As she rose, she said, a dark form loomed above her and a hand was crushed over her mouth. The attacker tore at her pajamas, she continued, ripping two buttons from the jacket.

"I struggled from his grasp and screamed," she said.

She said the man fled just before her mother and stepfather rushed into the room. The baby's neck and head were bruised.

Police said they found a 6-foot length of sash cord in a mirrored vanity stand. It was neatly coiled. Mrs. Barrows said she had never seen it before. Police and the coroner believed the child was strangled with a cord.

Detectives said the back door of the apartment was open but there was no sign of a forced entry.

House Halts Construction Of VA Hospital on Nevius Tract

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The House yesterday halted construction of a new 15-million-dollar veterans' hospital on the Nevius tract pending investigation by the House Appropriations Committee.

The delay was voted at the request of Representative Howard Smith (D., Va.), who charged that the Veterans' Administration would have to pay more than $897,000 for the Nevius tract—located on the Arlington side of Memorial Bridge—although other sites as suitable were available "nearby" for $25,000.

The House similarly directed suspension of construction plans for a new VA hospital at Tallahassee, Fla., at the instigation of Representative E. E. Cox (D., Ga.) and over the protests of several Florida Congressmen.

At the same time, the House voted down a move to add 100 million dollars to the VA medical care program.

Representative A. Leonard Allen (D., La.) offered the amendment to increase funds for veterans hospitals and medical care. Allen said that Maj. Gen. Paul R. Hawley, VA medical chief, had informed the House Veterans Committee on Monday that VA was short 28,000 personnel and 100 million dollars for carrying out a complete medical program in 1948.

All in all, the VA medical chief took an oral shellacking from the floor, but he will probably get the 100 million dollars extra he wants. Both Republican and Democratic leaders of the House Appropriations Committee vowed VA would get the additional money once the need was justified.

The Appropriations Committee also fought off an attempt by Representative Abe Goff (R., Idaho) to slash 10 million dollars of VA administrative funds in order to provide fewer jobs for the "briefcase boys." Except for the holding up of funds for the Nevius and Tallahassee hospitals, the VA appropriation of nearly seven billion dollars came out intact.

Representatives Smith and Cox prepared the way for their halt-the-work amendment in the Rules Committee on Monday by obtaining permission to offer their objections.

Smith offered the amendment which provided that no funds were to be allowed at all for purchasing a site or building a hospital at the Nevius tract or in Tallahassee. However, Representative Joe Hendricks (D., Fla.), got Smith to go along with a compromise which held up the funds pending Appropriations Committee investigation.

"The Federal Government is rapidly absorbing taxable land in the county," Smith charged. Furthermore, he added, a hospital built on the Nevius tract, adjacent to Arlington Cemetery, would "look down on the graves of department comrades."

Veterans' Administration already condemned the Nevius tract and has spent $100,000 in preparing architectural and engineering plans for the 750-bed hospital.

2 Villages 'War' to Settle Alps Ownership

Milan, Italy, June 18 (U.P.).—A miniature civil war flared in the Italian Alps just south of the Swiss border today when two tiny communes near Sodrio decided to fight it out for sole possession of their own "Alps."

Tired of years of negotiations, the communes of Teglio and Aprica, both of less than 1000 population, decided to settle their contested "frontier" dispute by more drastic means.

The disputed territory consists of two pieces of high ground known locally as the "Alps" of Frera and Pisa. Technically, the area belonged to Aprica but Teglio claimed its people were the historic and ethnic owners.

So, after weeks of planning, the forces of Teglio struck at dawn today. They cut the main highway and railway and laid siege to Aprica by blocking all entrances into the village. All trains, even expresses, and highway traffic were halted and passengers and others interned.

Special police units, responding to frantic messages of alarm, were rushed from Milan and quelled the uprising.

Residents of Aprica, which 20 years ago won the legal right to be the town with the "Alps" and the view were jubilant; the townspeople of Teglio were noncommittal.

Curley's Illness Is Critical One, His Doctor Says

Cohasset, Mass., June 18 (U.P.).—Boston's 72-year-old Mayor James M. Curley, who faces a 6 to 18-month jail sentence for mail fraud, is critically ill and "might die any time or he might not for a year," his physician said today.

The condition of the silver-haired Democratic leader, who is hospitalized here suffering from diabetes and high blood pressure, was reported "unchanged" after a fair night. The former Massachusetts Governor and Congressman received the last rites of the Catholic Church yesterday.

Dr. Edward H. Schott, who has been attending Curley since the mayor was hospitalized Friday, said the blood pressure of the veteran politician "continues to fluctuate . . . naturally higher at night and decreasing in the morning."

D. C. Druggists Urged to Keep Prices Down

By S. Oliver Goodman

A plea to help keep prices down was voiced yesterday at the ninety-fifth convention of the District of Columbia Pharmaceutical Association in the Mayflower Hotel.

Bernard Gould urged the druggists to sacrifice the "extra penny" in favor of "a contribution to a better economy." Gould is president of the American Marketing Association of New England and also is director of marketing research for Gillette Safety Razor Co.

"The fact that wholesalers' purchases from manufacturers are at a reduced rate is no reason for business to get panicky," he added. "Business at the retail level throughout . . . the United States is still running in excess of 1946, when retail sales were the highest ever recorded in the history of the country."

Retailers can make a greater margin of profit in the long run, he concluded, by evaluating the relative importance of consumer preference and merchandising their wares accordingly, not concerning themselves with the immediate profits accrued from high markups.

Nearly 200 Washington druggists attended yesterday's opening session of the two-day convention. Lee F. Diegelman as head of the association presided.

Another speaker was Joseph J. Shine, editor of the Central Pharmaceutical Journal, whose topic was "Today and Tomorrow in the Retail Drug Store."

A round-table discussion on current problems in the drug store was led by John McPherrin, editor of the American Druggist.

Washington Personality

Sprightly is the word for Howard S. Gott, 79-year-old president of Northwestern Federal Savings & Loan Association. "Too busy even to think of retirement", he puts in a full day of work every day and cently he took dancing lessons to bring his steps up to date.

Gott

One of the founders of Northwestern back in 1901, he has watched its growth to present status of an eight-million-dollar institution. Served as secretary until 1911, secretary-treasurer to 1942, president since then. Is head of real estate firms of Howard S. Gott Co., Inc., Municipal Realty Co., Municipal Improvement Co. and Eastland Gardens, Inc.

Born in Spencerport, N. Y., came to Washington in 1890, graduated from National University Law School in 1901, worked for War Department in Office Chief of Finance in early years, has one daughter and one granddaughter.

W. & L. Board to Act

Directors of Woodward & Lothrop are expected to act soon on naming a successor to William Wade Everett, who will retire as president on July 1. A number of executive changes at the department store are anticipated inasmuch as George N. Everett, the retiring president's brother, died on April 17, leaving open the post of vice president and general manager.

Banker for 45 Years

Charles Chipman Pineo, World Bank loan director who addressed the annual meeting Tuesday of the Washington Better Business Bureau, has been in the banking business for 45 years. His experience covers the international field. He has been associated with the Union Bank of Halifax, the Royal Bank of Canada, the National City Bank of New York and branches of the above institutions in Cuba, Brazil, Argentina and Uruguay. In 1945 he retired but in the fall of 1946 joined the staff of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

9½ Hours to Mexico City

Mexico City was brought within 9 hours and 35 minutes' travel time of Washington when American Airlines inaugurated direct daily air service between the two capitals on Monday via its new five-star DC-6 flagships.

Private Savings at New Peak

Long-term savings of individuals in the first quarter this year increased by about three billion dollars to reach an all-time high of 154.6 billions on March 31, the Institute of Life Insurance estimated yesterday.

The greatest single contribution to the growth of savings in the first quarter, the institute stated, was made up by United States Savings Bonds. Ownership of these securities showed a net increase of 1.2 billion, compared with a net gain of 1.5 billion in all of 1946.

Reluctant on College Donations

Most corporations are reluctant to contribute to colleges and universities, although they regard donations to charitable and welfare organizations as a necessary business expense, the National Industrial Conference Board reported yesterday.

A survey conducted by the research organization, which is supported by industrial companies and educational institutions, showed few business executives regarding gifts to endowed schools as "proper expenditures of corporate funds."

Some companies aided schools located in the plant's own community or those used for personnel recruitment, but one metal product manufacturer said: "It is very difficult to grant money to one college without making enemies of other institutions, or of stockholders, directors, employes who went to other schools."

'Nonstop' Strike Talk Recessed at St. Louis

St. Louis, Mo., June 17 (AP).—A "nonstop" conference, called in an effort to settle a walkout of some 3500 AFL bus and street car operators, was recessed late tonight at the request of both company and union officials.

Representatives of both parties said they would meet again at 9 a. m. tomorrow.

New York Cotton

New York, June 18 (AP).—Cotton futures were higher in active dealings today, closing $1.90 to $2.20 a bale higher than the previous close.

Tightening of old crop cotton supply and strength in outside markets stimulated considerable short covering. There was persistent buying of nearby July against the purchases of other deliveries, anticipating first notice day, June 24.

Indicative of the tight supply situation, certificated stocks available for delivery against futures contracts again dropped sharply. Current stocks totaled 24,857 bales, or about half of the peak level reached during May.

Peril to Press Freedom Seen in Radio Bill

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Freedom of the press is threatened by a Senate measure to rewrite laws governing broadcasting stations, the Senate Commerce Committee was warned yesterday.

Officials of the National Association of Broadcasters engaged in heated arguments with committee members over the bill, introduced by Senator Wallace H. White, jr. (R., Me.).

Former Circuit Court Justice Justin Miller, president of NAB, and A. D. Willard, jr., vice president, assailed provisions of the bill giving the Federal Communications Commission power to review radio programs.

The authority given FCC they alleged, would violate the First Amendment guaranteeing freedom of speech.

Future Conflict Seen

"Many top experts in both the journalistic and radio fields believe, as I do, that tomorrow's newspaper may well be printed daily on a facsimile received in your home," Willard declared.

"When that day comes, the newspapers of America will be subject to the rules and regulations of the FCC.

"Where will be the freedom of the press which successive Congresses and courts have protected for 156 years when the regulation prohibiting editorializing applies to the facsimile newspaper, and when the rule requiring equal opportunity for all sides in public questions becomes law for the American press?"

Movie Makers Warned

Willard warned movie makers that the law will also apply to them, through FCC control over television.

"I sincerely believe," Willard said, "that Congress must enact a law which makes radio as free as the press, or stand by and watch the press and motion picture subjected to the same Government controls, the same methods of intimidation, the same censorship, as radio suffers today."

A radio program should no more be censored than newspapers, Miller argued.

Senators White and McFarland (D., Ariz.) objected that radio broadcasting and newspaper publishing are not so similar as to be treated alike.

Review Called Proper

Newspapers are not granted Government licenses, nor given valuable and scarce radio frequencies such as are granted radios, McFarland said.

White declared it proper for the FCC to review radio programs when it is called upon to renew a station's license.

Miller added that the Blue Book, a book of regulations recently issued by FCC "reflects the opinion that the First Amendment does not govern the FCC.

"The Blue Book," he said, "undertakes to require broadcasters to change their program content on the theory that they are making too much money and should spend a larger proportion of it for radio programming."

Does your stenographer's WASTE basket look like this?

Maybe not! Yet it may pay you to look. Poorly spaced or smudged letters send too many sheets into the basket. This costs money and stenographic time.
Webster's Micrometric carbon paper helps to eliminate waste. A numbered scale on each sheet makes accurate spacing possible. You can remove the carbon paper with the scale, and avoid smudging your fingers or copies.
Use Micrometric! It costs no more than other quality sheets.

THE NATION THAT INVENTED THE STEAMSHIP MUST NOW USE IT...

Fine words, deep hopes, cannot bring us prosperity or security without MODERN American ships on the high seas

Right now, the American people have a choice of building merchant ships or not building them. Do you know what it will mean if we don't build them?

1. EVERYBODY BUT US

Every shipyard in the world today, except those in America, is now "booked" solidly for the next four years building MODERN merchant ships.

Within ten years, America may be the only major nation in the world with an "old" merchant fleet—with old, slow, uneconomical ships unable to stand up, in world trade, with the modern ships NOW being built everywhere else in the world.

Will this make for world peace, for world prosperity, for world security?

Will this make for American prosperity and America's peace?

History says: NO! NO! NO!

Yet the American shipbuilding program is virtually stopped right now!

2. BUT WHY BUILD NEW SHIPS...NOW?

Why do we need new ships now after all the ships we built "to win the war"?

The answer is very simple.

Our war-time merchant ships were designed for war not for peace.

These ships were obsolete the day they were built.

The vast majority of these ships are slow; are very uneconomical in their facilities for handling cargo; and are wholly unbalanced for our practical needs in post-war trade.

It would cost us more to use these ships today, than to dispose of them.

We Americans don't think of using old railroad engines, old airplanes, old automobiles, old factories as the best way to make money.

What's different about old ships?

And the simple fact remains that—even with all these ships—our merchant fleet today is missing specific types of ships we badly need and haven't got today: passenger vessels, refrigerator ships, fast special-design cargo ships.

We didn't build passenger ships "by the thousands" during the war. So we must build a handful of them now.

We didn't build fast cargo vessels during the war. So we must build a handful of them now.

3. ONLY 59 NEW SHIPS NOW WILL KEEP OUR SHIPPING STRONG!

We don't need thousands of new ships for peace.

We need only 59 new merchant ships started this year to "balance" our post-war fleet; to meet the demands of post-war trade; to keep American shipping strong and profitable.

We can build these ships now, and have them paid for out of profits, in two or three years of operation. American shipping is enormously profitable today, and is certain of profits for the next years to come.

And...

By building these ships now, we prevent the ghastly mistake we made after World War I, when we let the American shipbuilding industry evaporate.

The "emergency" shipbuilding program of World War II cost us billions of extra dollars and thousands of American lives (waiting for the "emergency" yards and ships to get built). How many times do we have to make the same mistake?

Is America so rich that we can afford to see our shipbuilding industry evaporate again?

Our national prosperity and security depend on keeping all our major skills in use.

Shipbuilding is such a major skill. It takes skilled craftsmen to build ships and manage shipyards; men with years of training and highly-developed, specific technical skills.

If there is any further delay in American shipbuilding, the small "core" of trained men we still have left, in both management and labor, will disappear into other industries.

And with them goes our shipping industry!

4. A STEADY PACE SAVES MONEY

Moreover, our "feast-and-famine" shipbuilding in the past has made our ships terribly expensive in peace as well as war.

A minimum steady pace of shipbuilding would make many economies possible.

Shipyard costs are greatly increased by the lack of continuous production; investment is curtailed; skilled management and labor drift off; technological improvements are blocked.

So, we desperately need a minimum adequate shipbuilding program continued in America.

59 new ships started now will do it.

A normal replacement program, of 60 to 80 ships a year, will keep it going indefinitely in the future. This will require only 250,000 shipbuilding workers. (We had 1,700,000 of them during the war!)

And this means more JOBS and DOLLARS for all Americans.

Each shipyard worker keeps six and a half other Americans at work in other industries supplying material for the ships: material from 46 of our states—not only steel but other metals, electrical equipment, paint, lumber, etc.

And then the ship itself multiplies JOBS and DOLLARS, again and again, through the cargoes it carries—the exports and imports on which our prosperity and the world's prosperity depend.

5. MORE FOR POTATOES THAN SHIPS

Some people raise the question about the partial government subsidies that are necessary for American shipbuilding.

Do you know how much you get for how little in these subsidies?

The subsidies required for American ships—for the ships that will make possible an American world-trade of $12 to $15 billion dollars a year—are a good deal less than 1/3 of 1% of the trade these ships help create; a good deal less than $50 million dollars a year!

The Federal subsidies for paved roads in America are over $180,000,000 a year.

And last year, the Federal Government paid a subsidy of $80,000,000 for potatoes alone!

And ship subsidy money comes back! As much as $7,000,000 has been returned IN A MONTH. Since VJ Day, American shipping hasn't cost the taxpayers one cent. Subsidies are returned after profits are earned by operators. And shipping is profitable!

The question of subsidies for ships might never have come up if shipping were just an industry and no more.

But shipping is a vital link in our nation's network of transportation; an instrument of national policy; a servant of our commerce; indispensable to our future prosperity; indispensable to our security.

No American subsidy can buy so much for so little, as the money invested in ships.

6. ARE OCEANS LESS THAN THE AIR?

We wouldn't think of keeping American planes out of the air, using foreign planes today.

Why should we think, then, of turning the oceans of the world over to foreign domination?

But the fact is this.

Before the war, 75% of America's exports and imports were carried by foreign ships.

What should it be now?

More and more, the other nations of the world are becoming "controlled" economies.

This means their ships will be used increasingly as instruments of foreign national policies, not as neutral carriers of American goods.

We cannot hope to get the kind of world trade, and the amount of world trade we need—and the world needs—from "controlled" foreign shipping.

If we want to see the patterns of world trade follow those of free enterprise, we need American ships to do it with.

We need American ships to carry at least 50% of America's exports and imports.

Not all of it, just half of it.

No foreign nation will be hurt by this!

Quite the contrary! American ships on the high seas will help all the world because American energy and ingenuity, American production and demand can create more trade for the entire world than any other nation can.

We cannot count on foreign shipping domination to do this for us, today!

7. AMERICA MUST DECIDE NOW

The question of what to do with our Merchant Marine is now up before the American people.

They must decide now whether, in ten years, America will be the only major nation in the world with an "old fleet"—depending on foreign shipping for American prosperity and security.

They must decide now whether the world will really have a chance at security and prosperity or not. American shipping is the indispensable tool of such security and prosperity.

Fine words, deep hopes, and dollars alone cannot bring us either prosperity or security without MODERN American ships on the high seas and active American shipyards, keeping the American Merchant Marine "young" and flexible and strong.

If you would like more facts on this subject, so crucially important to America's and the world's welfare, we will be happy to send them to you. Write to our National office.

Your Congressman knows these facts. We want you to know them too.

Blackwell Hurls No-Hit Game

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

UNDER THE breath-testing title of "Sockers in Sepia, a Continuation of the Drama of the Negro in Pugilistic Competition," Nat Fleischer's latest book is off the press, and the editor of Ring magazine has batted out another beaut.

POVICH

Lest it be forgotten that the Negro gladiators were in the ascendancy long before Joe Louis came along to win and then hold the world heavyweight title longer than any man in history, Fleischer cites the fistic achievements of a long line of colored fighters before Louis.

He recalls the conquests of Harry Wills, the Brown Panther, who hounded Jack Dempsey unsuccessfully for six years between 1920-26, and was finally denied a title shot when Dempsey drew the color line; and the story of Jack Blackburn, later the trainer of Louis, whose challenges sent Champion Stanley Ketchell into hiding.

And there was Middleweight Tiger Flowers, the God-fearing, Bible-toting Georgia boy, who was the best of his time, and won the world's championship from Harry Greb, one-time conqueror of Gene Tunney.

BUT THE MOST fanciful of all the Negro fighters wasn't an American. He was the west African boy who grew up to be light-heavyweight champion of the world, 'born Louis Siki Phal, but known to America as Battling Siki. Of his exploits in and out of the ring, Fleischer has chronicled an exciting chapter.

Siki, born just before the turn of the century, was a mascot of the French Territorial troops, in his native Senegal and Fleischer relates that "a well-to-do French woman visiting the region took a fancy to the agile little Negro, then 10 years old. She decided he would be an ornament to her villa on the Riviera in the role of bell boy, and for a financial consideration, the boy's parents consented to his departure with his patroness."

It was a polite sort of slave transaction and Siki tasted of the toney living on the Riviera for three years under the care of his benefactress. And then, as the story is written, "Madame died suddenly, and Siki found himself turned loose on the world to do the best he could." The best he could do was to win the world's lightheavyweight title, as we were saying.

ODD JOBS, including the unromantic labor of dish-washing, was Siki's lot until he drifted one day to Marseilles, then the capital of the French prize fighting industry, and found work as a sparring partner. But the First World War interrupted Siki's prize fight career and at 17 he enlisted in the Eighth Colonial Infantry.

The military career of Battling Siki was distinguished by his capture of nine Germans, single-handed, and he was promoted to corporal despite the fact he did not deliver his prisoners to the French lines. The story was that Siki surprised the Germans while they were eating, compelled them to lay down their rifles, collected the weapons, carried them and started marching the Huns ahead of him toward his own lines.

En route, however, Siki guessed that his prisoners were planning a mass attack on him, and reasoned that though he might kill a couple, the survivors would get him. So he dropped his captured weapons, ordered his captives into a big shell hole at the point of a gun and then surveyed the situation once more. His next act was to toss a couple of grenades into the shell hole, and hang around long enough to ascertain he now had on his hands nine dead Germans. He picked up his weapons, went back to his own lines and when his story was verified, he was decorated.

CAME THE war's end, and Battling Siki went back to the prize ring, won 15 straight victories in 1921, and finally badgered Georges Carpentier into a match for the lightheavy title in 1922. He knocked out Carpentier in six rounds and took over his victim's world light-heavy crown and the title of heavyweight champion of Europe.

For complete audacity, Siki's acceptance of a title fight with Mike McTigue was some kind of tops. The British hastily drew the color line to forbid a battle between Siki and Joe Beckett, their heavyweight champion, so Siki agreed to meet Irishman McTigue, in Dublin, no less, on St. Patrick's Day, no less. He lost the decision in 20 rounds, and his titles, and eventually came to America.

In this country, Siki was a sensation, out of the ring, not in it. the irrepressible African walked off the boat carrying a pet monkey. He won a few of his 24 American bouts, but not enough to impress anybody. He was in tavern brawls, and in jails, and narrowly escaped deportation. He stood on street corners and handed out cash to passers-by, after his fights. One morning in December, 1925, a New York policeman found a bullet-ridden body laying face down on Ninth ave. near 45th in the notorious Hell's Kitchen district. The wounds were in the back. Battling Siki apparently didn't have a chance, in his last fight.

Indians Beat Nats Again In 9-3 Rout

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Nats were afflicted last night with the kind of pitching that would curdle a mother's love, and the Cleveland Indians slapped them down, 9 to 3.

Sid Hudson and Mickey Haefner pitched 14-hit ball for the Nats, before 8437 unhappy Griffith Stadium customers who watched the Indians crowd seven runs into the seventh and eighth innings.

It was a lively ball delivery the Nats' pair was using, apparently. Anyway, five of the Indians' blows went for two-baggers, and a sixth was a triple as contrasted with the Nats' one extra base blow among the nine they collected.

Black Fails to Last

Don Black was the winning pitcher but he didn't last out the seventh inning when the Nats threatened to wipe out his 5-1 lead, but were checked by relief Pitchers Ed Klieman and Bob Lemon.

For six innings it was a tight 2-1 ball game with Cleveland in the lead. Both Hudson and Black were cleverly extricating themselves from danger in almost every inning, but the seventh the Indians ripped into Hudson for three more runs with Keltner's two-run double the pivotal blow.

In the eighth they found Haefner a soft touch and scored four more on three hits, a pair of walks and a passed ball.

The Nats went in front briefly, 1-0, in the third inning after muffing scoring chances in the first and second. With a runner on third and only one out, Black fanned Spence in the first inning.

Eddie Yost opened the third with a double to left and reached third with one out but Black fanned Vernon in this crisis and it was a misplay by the Cleveland pitcher that gave the Nats their run. He was slow in covering first on Spence's grounder to Gordon, and missed the throw for an error, Yost scoring.

Lead Is Short Lived

It was a short-lived lead. The Indians came up with two runs in the fourth on three consecutive hits. Keltner doubled to left. Hegan bounced a double off Yost's chest, and Black himself singled to center.

In the seventh Jack Conway opened with a two-bagger to left. He took third on Edwards' looping single and scored on Fleming's fly. Gordon later drew a pass, and with two out, Keltner's second double, over Spence's head, fetched in two more runs.

Haefner got the full treatment from the Indians in the eighth. Pitcher Klieman singled, and Metkovich rapped a triple to deep left center. Two walks filled the bases, and a passed ball moved Metkovich home and the other runners up. Hal Peck doubled down the right-field line for the final two runs.

Cut Tribe's Lead

Meanwhile, the Nats could produce only one threat—a rally in the seventh that knocked Black out of the box but succeeded only in cutting the Cleveland lead to 5-3 in the seventh.

Christman's single, another by Yost and a walk to Case filled the bases with two out, and Vernon's single to right moved two runs in, but Klieman replaced Black and disposed of Spence for the important third out.

The Nats filled the bases with two out in the eighth, but it was not quite a batting rally. Klieman walked the first two men he faced and was taken out in favor of Lemon, who walked Pinch Hitter Robertson to load the basepaths. Then he fanned Yost.

Early Wynn will try to salvage a victory out of the series for the Nats today in an afternoon game . . . He'll oppose Bryan Stephens, rookie Cleveland right-hander . . . The fans saw a rare play in the third inning last night when Second Baseman Gordon fielded Case's grounder which pulled First Baseman Les Fleming out of position, and then beat Case to first base for an unassisted put-out . . . Buddy Lewis left the game in the first inning when struck on the base of his spine by Catcher Hegan's throw as he slid into second on a steal . . . His injury is believed not serious, only painful . . . Spence was cheated out of a hit when his smash in the sixth inning hit the bag at first base and bounded into the mitt of Fleming.

Giants Batter Pirates, 12-5; Hank Hits 2

Pittsburgh, June 18 (AP).—The slugging New York Giants handed the fading Pittsburgh Pirates another shellacking today, walloping four Buc hurlers for 20 hits to score a 12-5 victory.

Behind the big barrage, rookie Larry Jensen went the route for the New Yorkers although he was clipped for two homers by Hank Greenberg and one by Ralph Kiner which accounted for all Pittsburgh runs. Greenberg, in addition to his tenth and eleventh four-baggers of the year, collected a single and drove in four tallies. Kiner's homer was his thirteenth of the campaign.

Harvard Crew Defeats Yale

New London, Conn., June 18 (AP). Harvard won its ninth straight crew victory over a lion-hearted Yale varsity eight today in the eighty-second rowing of America's oldest intercollegiate athletic competition. The time for the 4 miles was 20:40 with Yale 6 seconds behind.

Yale, trailing by three lengths with a mile to go, closed with a rush that raised the beat to 40 against Harvard's 38 and cut Harvard's margin to a length and a half.

Yale won the freshman race over 2 miles in 9:43 to Harvard's 9:52. Harvard came back to take the junior varsity in 9:42. Yale was timed in 9:47.

Weather conditions were perfect. A drizzle that started in the morning stopped in midafternoon. There was scarcely any breeze and the surface of the Thames was smooth. Approximately 200 yachts were grouped along the last mile and thousands of persons lined the banks.

Bosox Go 15 Innings to Nip Browns, 6-5, For 8th Straight

Boston, June 18 (AP).—Johnny Pesky's two-out single drove in Pinch Runner Eddie Pellagrini with the tally that gave the Boston Red Sox a 15-inning 6-5 win over the St. Louis Browns in a four-hour, 20-minute struggle tonight before a thrill-exhausted 34,462 crowd.

Billy Hitchcock put the Browns into a 3-2 lead with a thirteenth inning homer and then a 5-3 lead in the fourteenth by singling with the bases loaded.

The Red Sox came from behind four times before winning the game.

Rookie Ellis Kinder of the Browns and Mickey Harris of the Red Sox engaged in a 1-1 duel for seven innings, but both left the game in the eighth when each club came up with a run.

Bob Moncrief pitched the last eight innings for the Browns, with the Red Sox Calling on four relief pitchers before Rookie Mel Parnell was finally credited with the victor in the fifteenth.

Darkhorse Clarence Doser Fires 67, Leads at Detroit

By a Post Reporter

Detroit, Mich., June 18.—Thirty-eight-year-old Clarence Doser, a journeyman pro from Hartdale, N. Y., took the spotlight away from the favorites in the twenty-ninth renewal of the National PGA championship today.

Doser mastered the long, rugged Plum Hollow course in a 5-under-par 67 to lead the field at the end of the first 18 holes of qualifying.

One of the last of the 138 to tee off, the short, stocky Doser posted his score just as it began to appear that Masters Champion Jimmy Demaret, the colorful Texan, and Claude Harmon of Mamaroneck, N. Y., would own the first-day advantage with their fine 68's.

Doser, the father of three kids, led the Metropolitan New York section in qualifying for the National Open recently, but failed to make the grade for the final 36 of the open at St. Louis last week.

He went out in 34 today, 2 under, and clipped 3 more strokes off par coming home. His card showed 6 birdies, 1 bogie and 11 pars.

Once a Semifinalist

Two years ago at Dayton, Doser made his only previous bid for golfing fame as he turned in surprise victories over Toney Penna, Ky Laffoon and "Jug" McSpaden before losing 7 and 6 to Sam Byrd in the semifinals of the PGA title argument.

Doser's only lapse came on the fifteenth where he hit a trap, but he made up for that with birdie putts of 9, 10 and 15 feet, and three others of the 2-foot variety.

The New Yorker's great 67 gave him a one-stroke edge over Claude Harmon, a fellow New York, from Mamaroneck, and Jimmy Demaret, golfdom's laughing boy and the year's big money winner from Ojai, Calif.

Thirty-three-year-old Demaret and 30-year-old Harmon, two of the sweetest swingers and singers in the pro ranks, made use of their knowledge of the course in banging into the runner-up bracket. Demaret was pro at Plum Hollow in 1942-43, while Harmon played for years in this district.

They Can Sing, Too

Harmon tuned up for his fine feat by appearing as an impromptu singing guest star at a local night club last evening, while Demaret sang (by transcription) on Bing Crosby's program.

The hot-shot pro field put on a show for the 6,300 spectators, largest opening day attendance in the event's history, as two score of the field matched or bettered par.

Deadlocked at sub-par 70 were Bobby Locke, the South African star who has won four of seven tournaments in this country; Bob Hamilton of Chicago who surprised the world by beating Byron Nelson for the PGA crown in 1944; Jim Ferrier, the reformed Australian now operating out of San Francisco, and Chandler Harper of Portsmouth, Va.

Defending Champion Ben Hogan, who gets into the match play without qualifying, turned in a par 72, which tied him with about 20 others including such talent as long-hitting Jimmy Thomson; Sam Byrd, Plum Hollow pro and former understudy to Babe Ruth; Johnny Revolta, the 1935 champion, and stylist Toney Penna.

Owen Tries His Hand at Softball

Springfield, Mo., June 18 (AP).—Mickey Owen, former Brooklyn catcher outlawed from professional baseball because of his jump to the Mexican League last year, made his debut as a softball player last night.

Playing second base for the Florence Avenue Greenhouse, a class A entry in the City Amateur Association, Owen went hitless in four trips to the plate, but handled two pop flies successfully in the field.

Owen sought to play for the district softball championship team in an exhibition here last year, but was denied permission by State softball commissioner.

Cincy's Ace Walks Four Braves in 6-0 Shutout

Cincinnati, June 18 (U.P.).—Ewell Blackwell, the sensational young righthander for the Cincinnati Reds, pitched the first no-hit, no-run game of the 1947 season tonight when he defeated the Boston Braves, 6 to 0, in a marvelous exhibition of skill.

It was the first no-hitter in the majors since Bobby Feller turned the trick against the New York Yankees on April 30, 1946.

Blackwell's superlative hurling was all the more remarkable in that it came against the Braves, currently the hardest hitting club in the National League.

Prior to tonight's game, the bombarding Braves had smashed out 52 hits in their last four starts for a total of 42 runs and an average of 13 hits per game.

Blackwell, regarded as the greatest young star to rise in the postwar era of major leaguers, permitted only four Boston batters to get to first base, all of them on walks.

Although he is the National League strikeout leader, he did not concentrate on fanning batters tonight but bore down to prevent them from getting even the semblance of a safe blow. He struck out only three batters, less than half his usual total for a game.

The elongated speed ball artist, who looks like he is falling out of a tree when he lets go with his deceptive delivery, registered his tenth victory against two defeats.

It was the first time that he had pitched at night this season, although he has said that he believed he would be more effective under the lights than on day-time baseball.

While the lanky Cincy sophomore held Boston helpless, Babe Young of the Reds pounded two home runs with two men on base each time. Young's homers both sailed over the right field wall. The blow in the first inning scored Baumholtz who had singled and Hatton who had walked. It happened just that way in the eighth also.

Lew Worsham Has Shaky 74

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Detroit, Mich., June 18.—Lew Worsham, Washington's National Open champion, had a rough time of it today, shooting 38, 36—74 in the first day of qualifying play in the Professional Golfers Association Tournament.

Worsham, victor over Sammy Snead in a dramatic playoff for the Open title in St. Louis last Sunday, obviously suffered a letdown in the 18 holes over the tricky Plum Hollow course.

Playing like a man tuckered out, Lew's putting was extremely faulty.

He used up 31 strokes on the greens. Twice he three-putted, and his card showed five bogies and one double bogey on the par 72 layout.

Worsham took a fat "6," two over par, on the 349-yard 11th hole where he pitched out of the rough with a sand wedge and overshot the green, landing in a trap to the left.

Lew started off in championship fashion with a birdie on the 477-yard par five first hole.

But he didn't have the touch consistently today although he scored five birdies.

Worsham played with Jim Ferrier, onetime Australian hot-shot, and Jim Turnesa, of New York's golfing Turnesa family. His starting time—10 a.m.—was not that befitting a champion, but the pairings were

Boston Man Lopes to Victory Over Belle Moose at Charles Town

$4.40 Shot Wins After Rough Start

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., June 18. Boston Man, one-time stake horse who was brought back to the races by H. M. (Suitcase) Simpson of Washington, D. C., won the Harpers Ferry Purse, Charles Town equivalent of the Dixie Handicap, here today.

Carrying the colors of Mrs. J. D. S. Coleman, the 9-year-old son of Bostonian forged to the wire 2½ lengths in front of the closest opposition while under excellent handling by Jockey Stanley Austin of Baltimore.

Installed a $4.40 favorite by a midweek crowd of 6500, Boston Man finished with daylight to spare as F. L. Miller's Belle Moose headed G. Y. Booker's Lawless Miss out of the place money in the field of six.

Light rain before and during the early stages of the program failed to dull the track and Boston Man was clocked in 1:19 4/5. The track record for the 6½ furlongs is held by Misty Lady at 1:18 2/5.

Almost a Champ

The victory over Lawless Miss, just shipped in from Delaware Park, gives Boston Man the title of "best horse on the grounds" although he hasn't yet met the Warren Stable's Annie's Dream. A clash between these two is now eagerly awaited.

A near accident marked the start. Belle Moose stumbled and in the resultant crowding both Boston Man and Lawless Miss were shuffled back. Belle Moose recovered quickly to take command over Foot Soldier going to the first turn.

Patsy Grant rushed Lawless Miss up on the outside and she got abreast of Belle Moose. These two battled along for the pace-making honors while Austin saved ground with Boston Man.

Wide and Winner

At the far turn, Austin began his move on the outside and he looked all the part of a winner from there. Austin took him wide for insurance and the big fellow ran straight and true through the stretch to make Belle Moose and Lawless Miss appear to be tied.

The Daily double paid $23.80 and the two winners were ridden by a veteran and a youngster. Sammy Palumbo booted Mrs. L. E. Torreyson's Portland Bells home in the opener at $9.40 and Apprentice Eddie Hopkins rode the first winner of his career on V. S. McClintock's Polly's Pet at $5.60 in the second.

Bob Brownell Paces Field At Columbia

A field of 88, led by Bobby Brownell, Ralph Bogart, and Volney Burnett, three of the leading golfers of the Middle Atlantic area, tee off today in the twenty-third annual Maryland State Amateur Tournament at Columbia Country Club.

They will be out to capture the championship vacated by Otto Greiner of Baltimore, who turned pro since taking the crown last year.

Brownell is holder of the District of Columbia, Middle Atlantic and Kenwood Invitational championships. Burnett and Bogart have been his chief rivals in all of these tournaments.

The 32 low scorers in the qualifying round will begin match play tomorrow, when two rounds of 18 holes are scheduled. Two more 18-hole rounds will be played Saturday, and the finalists will meet in a 36-hole match Sunday.

At Long Last:

Colts Lose—But Only by Graduations

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Tonight is graduation night at Calvin Coolidge High.

It's the night that the seven other District public high schools have been looking forward to for three long years. Its been that long since Coolidge first began to dominate the interhigh fields of athletics.

King

Tonight, the presentation of diplomas will accomplish what the seven other interhigh schools have failed to do—break Coolidge's stranglehold on most of the interhigh championships. Thirty-six boys, who have worn the Coolidge sports uniforms will receive their diplomas.

Among them are Stanley King, winner of eight varsity letters; Dick Taylor, winner of seven, and Bill Witzel, winner of six. King, by earning three letters each in baseball and football and two in basketball, set a new record for the school for letter-winning.

13 Titles to School

Since this graduation class started at Coolidge in September, 1944, it has helped bring 13 championships to the school, including 2 in baseball, 2 in basketball, 1 in football, 3 in golf, 1 in tennis, 1 in rifle shooting and 3 in archery. Twice Coolidge has been second in tennis, once in baseball and once in rifle shooting.

"It adds up to probably the greatest all-round record ever compiled by an interhigh school, says Mike Kelley, Coolidge cadet instructor, who is a veteran of 30 years of coaching in the high schools.

"When I was at Eastern during the early '30s, we often won championships in three of the four major sports (baseball, basketball, football and track), but we weren't also as good in rifle, golf, tennis and the like."

"What makes Coolidge's record even more imposing," says Kelley, "is that it was compiled against seven other schools, whereas we only had to play four other schools."

Interest Ever Enjoyed

The 1946-47 school year was the greatest ever enjoyed by the Coolidge athletic teams. The Colts won championships in baseball, basketball, football, golf, rifle and archer. They were second to Wilson in tennis.

That they wound up in a last place tie in track may be partially attributed to the fact that Coolidge, the newest of the public high schools, is the only one without a stadium and a track.

"There are lean days ahead," says Julian Colangelo, Coolidge's basketball coach, "but we have nothing to kick about. A class of athletes like the one that's leaving now is one in a million. We're hoping for another one like it to come along soon. Until then, we'll be content with a lot of memories."

The O'Hara sports bribery bill for the District of Columbia was approved yesterday by a Senate District judiciary subcommittee headed by Senator James P. Kem (R., Mo.). It will be considered by the full Senate District Committee next week.

The bill recently passed the House. It provides for a fine of $10,000 and imprisonment up to five years for offering a bribe in athletic contests, and a fine of $5000 and 1-year imprisonment for accepting a bribe.

Center of Hudson River May Be Used for Regatta Course

New York, June 18 (AP).—Asa S. Bushnell, secretary-treasurer of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association, said today that IRA stewards would hold an emergency meeting in Poughkeepsie tomorrow to consider a possible last-minute change in the course of Saturday's Poughkeepsie regatta.

Bushnell, who also is commissioner of the Eastern college athletic conference, said coaches of the crews now training at Poughkeepsie for the rowing classic had requested that the course for the regatta be moved back to the exact center of the Hudson River.

"When the Poughkeepsie race was last held in 1941 the crews rowed right down the middle of the river, with the center lane bisecting the center span of the railroad bridge," Bushnell said in a prepared announcement.

"The same arrangement would have been set up again this year had it not been for the fact that, at an IRA meeting last December, the coaches recommended that the course be shifted closer to the west shore. Their latest proposal calls for the return of the course to its regular position and route."

Members of the IRA board of stewards are Louis P. Andreas, Syracuse, chairman; Ralph J. Furey, Columbia; Robert J. Kane, Cornell; Capt. Edmund B. Taylor, Navy, and H. Jamison Swartz, Pennsylvania.

Meanwhile, at Poughkeepsie, all the crews braved a light drizzle to work out on the Hudson as the training tempo began to pick up. All 11 colleges had their shells on the water in spite of the relatively poor conditions.

Coach Rusty Callow of Penn gave the consensus of most of the mentors when he remarked he planned no changes, "unless somebody gets hurt." All coaches mapped time trials for this evening as the weather cleared at noon.

Fans who come to Poughkeepsie had better bring along tents if they plan to stay overnight, as hotel managers have reported full bookings. Complicating the hotel situation is the fact that the Exchange Clubs of New York State are holding their convention at Poughkeepsie this weekend.

Hinshaw Title To Mrs. Pray

Mrs. L. G. Pray yesterday added a 92 to her previous scores to win the low gross championship in the twelfth annual W. W. Hinshaw tournament over 72 holes with a total of 352 at the Columbia Country Club.

Mrs. Pray scored 90, 87, 83—92. Mrs. John Ives, second with 376, scored 94, 94, 95—93. Low net went to Mrs. E. S. Hartshorn with 331 to 336 for Mrs. Webb Hayes.

Mrs. William Abell won the best 36-hole net with 162; Mrs. J. P. Harper best 18 holes net with 82; Mrs. Hugh MacKenzie the select 36 with 200 and Mrs. W. C. Geleng the select 18 with 94.

Hursey-Kapilow Fight Attractive

Fight circles last night turned attention to the scheduled 10-round boxing bout between Smuggy Hursey, fast-rising local middleweight, and Danny Kapilow, highly regarded New York youngster, at Griffith Stadium, July 2.

Hursey recently has stolen the spotlight with consecutive victories over Billy Arnold, Aaron Perry and Bee Bee Washington while Kapilow holds a three-round knockout over Perry and won a hard fought eight-round decision over Hursey at Griffith Stadium two years ago when Smuggy was a 17-year-old.

Mrs. Mason Victor In Golf Cup Tourney

Mrs. J. L. Mason won the Tschiffely Cup yesterday by scoring a low gross of 82, 90—172 yesterday at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

Low net in the 36-hole tourney was won by Mrs. George Bailey, jr., who carded 87, 79—176—16—160. Close behind was Mrs. Harold Smith with 83, 86—179—18—161. Mrs. Henry Pratt won low putt laurels with 28, 33—61.

London, June 18 (AP).—Jack Kramer of Los Angeles, U. S. tennis champion seeded No. 1 in next week's Wimbledon tourney, today drew as his first round opponent a British player now competing in a tourney to determine his right to enter the All-English net carnival.

The top 10 in the elimination meet will be eligible for Wimbledon and their identities will not be known until later this week.

Tom Brown of San Francisco, seeded No. 3 here, drew Eric Sturgess of the South African Davis Cup team, as his foe and Pancho Segura of Ecuador and the University of Miami, opens up against Jaroslav Drobnfiy of Czechoslovakia.

Yvon Petra of France, reigning champion, was pitted against Don Butler, 36-year-old British Davis Cupper.

Budge Patty of Los Angeles, was matched against Billy Sidwell, sixth-ranking Australian, who has won several tourneys this season.

John Bromwich, top-ranking Australian and seeded No. 2 in the men's singles, meets the Swiss champion, Jost Spitzer.

Six Grid Games For Catholic U.

A six-game schedule was announced yesterday for the only collegiate football team in Washington that plays strictly for fun and exercise. The announcement by Athletic Director Eddie La Fond heralds the return to grid competition of Catholic University.

Five of the games will be against Mason-Dixon Conference foes. The Johns Hopkins game will be the first ever to be played between the two schools. LaFond also revealed that Tom Chisari has been added to the C. U. physical education department staff. He joins the recently appointed football coach, Gene Augusterfer, a former C. U. athlete.

The schedule:
October 11, Western Maryland at Westminster, Md.; 18, Randolph-Macon; 25, Johns Hopkins at Baltimore, Md.
November 1, Newport News Apprentice School; 8, Mount St. Mary's; 15, Washington College.

Referees Must Pass Physical Examination

Reds Put Off Trip by Writers

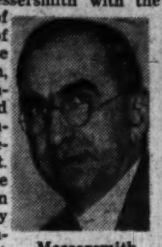
Berlin, June 18 (U.P.).—Brig. Gen. Charles K. Gailey, jr., American Military Government chief of staff, today formally protested Russian postponement of a long-scheduled tour of the Soviet zone of Germany by seven American news correspondents.

The party was to have left today, but less than 2 hours before the scheduled departure they were told that the trip was postponed indefinitely because the Russian officer authorized to sign their passes had not done so.

The correspondents are Jack Raymond, New York Times; John Elliott, New York Herald Tribune; Maurice Kane, Los Angeles Daily News; Henry Burroughs, Associated Press; James O'Donnell, Newsweek magazine; Ed Haaker, National Broadcasting Co., and Gerhard Stindt, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Newsreels.

Peron Honors Messersmith With Banquet

Buenos Aires, June 18 (U.P.).—President Juan D. Peron today decorated U. S. Ambassador George S. Messersmith with the Great Cross of the Order of Liberator Jose de San Martin, during an unprecedented farewell banquet for the retiring diplomat.



Messersmith

It was the first time in living memory that an Argentine President had so honored an outgoing foreign diplomat. The highest farewell attention paid to the most popular envoys heretofore has consisted of a banquet given by the Foreign Minister.

Ambassador and Mrs. Messersmith are scheduled to sail for New Orleans Friday, after 13 months in Argentina. He will be replaced by James Bruce, whose nomination was announced yesterday in Washington by President Truman.

Replying to President Peron's farewell remarks at Government House Messersmith fully indorsed the Argentine government's inter-American policies. He said, in part:

"In all matters which have been discussed, whether they referred to our respective countries or to the broader picture of the Americas and the world, there was always complete comprehension and the obvious and determined desire to collaborate in promoting the peace, security and economic welfare of the hemisphere.

"At no time has, in any way, the course of the present Argentine government in its orientation in the American system shown the slightest deviation."

He said that, as customary, he would hand over the decoration to the State Department until he retired from active service.

House Turns Down Housing Reorganization

The House disapproved by a voice vote yesterday President Truman's plan to reorganize the Government's housing bureaus into a single Federal housing and home finance agency.

The action leaves the fate of the President's proposal entirely in the hands of the Senate.

The House voted down the plan without debate. Mr. Truman sent his proposal to Congress on May 27. Under the law it would become effective in 60 days unless disapproved in the meantime by both houses of Congress. If the Senate disapproves, the plan will be killed. If it approves it, the reorganization will go into effect.

To speed plans for low-rent public housing projects the Senate Banking Committee recommended yesterday that Congress relax a 10-year-old regulation setting $5000 as the maximum that could be spent on a dwelling unit built with Federal funds.

The committee approved a bill which would permit local housing authorities to pay the difference between $5000 and present construction costs.

USES Shift Approved

President Truman's plan for transfer of the United States Employment Service to the Labor Department won approval of a Senate Labor Subcommittee yesterday.

Known as Reorganization Plan 2 the measure now goes to the full committee, and, regardless of the committee vote, to the Senate.

The House already has rejected Plan 2. Unless the Senate also rejects it, it will go into effect July 1.

At the same time a Senate Banking Subcommittee heard Raymond M. Foley, National Housing Administrator, recommend the passage of the Administration Reorganization Plan 3. Plan 3 would merge many of the functions of present housing agencies into a single unit.

Opponents of Plan 3 will be heard today.

Civil Service Flooded With Employe Appeals

APPEALS: Civil Service has a record number on hand. As of yesterday it had appeals pending from 120 employes here who believe they have been unjustly fired, an all-time high. And the appeals are coming in at a rate of 200 a day.

Kluttz

In addition, the commission has the cases of 722 employes who are appealing for higher efficiency ratings. A better rating probably would save many of these people from being laid off.

The commission is being flooded with appeals, and a big backlog is building up, even though it recently assigned additional employes to the appeals unit. John Overholt, unit chief, said it would take from 60 to 90 days to dispose of the cases. However, he explains that the employe who wins his appeal will be ordered back on the job in reduction-in-force cases, no matter when the decision is made.

All of which brings up this timely reminder—file your appeal with the Overholt unit if you're dissatisfied with your reduction notice or your rating. There's nothing in the world that this writer or anyone else on the outside of Government can do to help you.

STORY: The other day the House Agriculture Committee was debating parity prices, Government subsidies and other problems facing the Nation's farmers. The leaders in it were Chairman Hope of Kansas and Representative Pace of Georgia. At one point, Representative Cotton (R., N. H.), broke in to comment:

"Gentlemen, as I see it, the salvation of the American farmer lies with Hope, Pace and Parity."

NOTES: Frank B. Bourn yesterday was awarded the exceptional civilian service medal by the War Department. He's 79 and he has served 19 Secretaries of War. He has certainly earned the recognition . . . Emil N. Levin, a Chicago lawyer, has been appointed to head up the postmaster investigation to be made by the Senate Civil Service Committee.

AGRICULTURE: A run-off election will be held tomorrow to elect an employe member of its board of review. Candidates are: John L. Shaffer of PMA; Clyde R. Johnson, REA; James E. Horton, the Solicitor's office, and Richard Hollis of the Information office.

LAY-OFF STORY: A man arrived here from Labor's regional office in Chicago to look for another Federal job. He grabbed a cab at Union Station and it wasn't long before he asked the driver:

"What's the chances of getting a Government job here?

The driver, who had a sense of humor, replied: "I understand there are plenty of OPENINGS in the liquidating agencies."

PROGRESS: Representative Lane (D., Mass.) yesterday introduced two bills which would, if enacted, go a long way toward treating dismissed Federal employes like human beings. His bills would: (1) require the Government to pay a 30-day dismissal wage to each fired employe, and (2) bring the workers under the unemployment compensation at State rates.

Meantime, one top Federal official after another expressed approval of the proposed bill drawn up for Senator Langer which was revealed here yesterday. That measure would pay transportation back home for dismissed employes, as well as give them a two-week dismissal wage and cover them under a modified form of unemployment compensation. It was reported on excellent authority that the President, if asked by Congress, would okay the principle of both bills.

VA.: During House debate on the VA appropriation bill, Representative Rogers (R., Mass.) declared:

"There ought to be one huge building here in Washington where veterans' affairs can be taken care of; where their files are kept so that you'd know where the insurance policies of these poor men are."

Representative Wigglesworth (R., Mass.) agreed that it was a "very unfortunate situation" and he added every big insurance company had its records centralized."

But this is the payoff—VA wants to move part of its insurance work in New York back here, but the Wigglesworth group denied funds for it.

ADVICE: An advisory committee to the staff of the Senate Civil Service Committee has been created. On it are representatives of six employe unions, four veterans groups, and a dozen agencies. Its officers are:

John Overholt, chairman, of Civil Service; James Burns, vice chairman, of the American Federation of Government Employes; Draxel Knight, secretary, of Maritime, and Gus Hertz of VA, assistant secretary.

Two subcommittees have been set up to study improvements in the efficiency rating system. Also in the works is a thorough-going study of the appeals' system.

Court Report Lists Needs Of Juveniles

Better Recreation Facilities, Schools Cited to Congress As Pressing Needs

The youths of Washington are faced with inadequate schools, underpaid teachers, a postwar wave of broken marriages and poor social, recreation and medical services.

Those are the main causes of juvenile delinquency in this city, President Truman and Congress were told yesterday.

The report was made by officials of Juvenile Court, who admitted that their court has been unable to fully cope with the situation. For example, the best they could do in the report was to show the picture here as it was almost a year ago, on June 30, 1946.

The reason for the delay, it was said, is a lack of clerical help, funds, and social workers.

During the year cited, the court handled 6125 complaints. Of these, 3510 were juveniles, 2615 were adult cases. Delinquency cases increased 3.2 per cent over 1945, 18.6 per cent over 1939.

Theft Cases Lead

Stealing accounts for more than half the youth cases of the court. "Ungovernable" accounts for the larger number of girls before the court.

Of the total, less than one per cent involved sex crimes. In 1945, sex offenses accounted for 1.9 per cent.

The incidence of crime for boys is highest in the 17 to 18 year age group. For girls, it is between 15 and 16 years. Only 82 complaints, representing 2.6 per cent, were for children less than 10 years old in 1946. In 1945, this type was 5.5 per cent of the total.

The court was able to place 674 juveniles on probation in 1946. The year before 375 were so classified.

More Parents Cited

Parents cited for not properly caring for their children almost doubled in the year from 195 to 330. Because the "home situation was so disorganized" 121 children were committed to the Board of Public Welfare until they reached the age of 21.

Psychological service was received by 236 children. "The chief causative factors in the difficulties of juveniles referred for psychological service was found to be that of unfavorable home setting."

The Court recommended that Congress give it an adequate staff to handle the cases, that teachers be given enough pay to keep the best in the profession, and that more schools be erected here. Congress also was asked to better provide for the Receiving Home and other institutions, and that foster homes be better compensated.

Gang Member, Two Lawyers Held in Melee

John Kendrick, 40, a member of the old "Tri-State Gang" who already had been arrested twice this month on assault charges, added a charge of being drunk and disorderly conduct to his score yesterday.

Arrested with him during a melee at 14th and K sts. nw., shortly before 2 a. m. were two lawyers, James K. Hughes, 40, of 1405 44th st. nw., and Hyman D. Himmelstein, 43, of 2400 16th st. nw.

At the same hour, Jean Neva Kent, 31, of 1407 15th st. nw., appeared at Casualty Hospital with a broken jaw, head injuries and internal injuries, which she said were inflicted by Kendrick about 5:30 p. m. Tuesday. Hospital authorities described her condition as serious.

Kendrick and Hughes, both charged with being drunk and disorderly, were released under $15 collateral each for appearance in Municipal Court July 16. Police said Hughes put up both collaterals. Himmelstein, charged with being drunk, was released under $10 collateral for appearance in Municipal Court today.

Police said the three were arrested after one of them cursed Police Pvts. R. K. Kallio and J. W. Eschbacher of the Second Precinct from a taxicab. A radio call of "policeman in trouble" brought nearly a dozen motorcycle men, scout cars and cruisers to the scene.

Kendrick is now out on $3500 bond on a charge of assault with intent to kill. He was arrested June 1 after allegedly firing a shot at Tommy English, 34, of 832 10th st. nw.

He was arrested again last Thursday on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon after Jean Neva Kent was found badly beaten in a room at a 16th street hotel. The case was nolle prossed by the District attorney Monday, following a conference with Miss Kent.

Southwest Community House, 501 2d st. sw., will have an "all boys' night" tonight at 8. During the evening 125 boys will participate in outdoor sport events.

At 9 a musical program will be presented, followed by refreshments. Julian Houston, a new member of the staff of the Community House, will meet boys at the center during the evening.

Rush Hour Bus Service Given 2 D. C. Areas

PUC Approves Plan For Wesley Heights, American U. Park

Special rush-hour bus service for residents of Wesley Heights and American University Park areas was ordered yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission.

The order approved a plan submitted May 16 by Capital Transit Co., following conferences with residents of both areas.

Beginning Sunday, June 29, each area will have its own bus service between 7:25 and 8:46 a. m.; 4:59 and 6:55 p. m., PUC announced.

Buses from American University Park will by-pass Wesley Heights and move to and from the downtown area via Massachusetts ave. between Ward Circle and Cathedral ave.

Wesley Heights buses will follow the regular route, leaving Massachusetts ave. at Cathedral ave. and traveling west on Cathedral, north on New Mexico ave. and east on Nebraska ave. as far as Ward Circle.

They will turn around at Ward Circle and return through the Wesley Heights area, without continuing to American University Park.

E. C. Giddings, assistant to the CTC president, said the plan would provide "better service to American University Park and more comfortable service to Wesley Heights."

The commission said it planned no further action to provide additional service for Wesley Heights, requested at a public hearing February 28. But it left the door open for consideration of any rerouting plans submitted at a later date.

At the same time, PUC granted permission for Capital Transit Co. to extend the route C-8 Ridge rd. branch of the Sousa Bridge bus line, beginning Monday, June 23.

It told the company it could extend the line two blocks to Ridge rd. and Ely pl. and build a turnaround facility there. The extension will provide additional service for approximately 350 residents of the DuPont Park Apartments area, PUC said.

Benning Bus Plea To PUC Unopposed

Only one citizens' representative appeared yesterday to testify at a Public Utilities Commission hearing on Capital Transit's plan to substitute buses for streetcars on the Benning-Rosslyn's line's eastern section.

He was Winters Haydock, member of the transportation committee of the Citizens Council for Community Planning, Inc. "The committee believes the evidence indicates that this change is desirable from the standpoint of the public," he testified.

Meanwhile, company witnesses produced charts, graphs, and even movies as proof that the plan would provide better, cheaper service and would not contribute to traffic congestion.

Taking the stand to sum up the company's case near the close of the two-day hearing, CTC President E. D. Merrill declared, "It is inevitable that streetcars on the Benning line would create congestion unless track changes are made at great expense. Buses would help improve these traffic conditions at less expense."

Rollins Gets Eccentric's $1,500,000

Rollins College will receive the $1,500,000 estate of the late hotel-hermit, William Hayes Ackland, it was decreed yesterday in District Court.

Thus the strange dream of eccentric Ackland appeared finally on its way to fulfillment. For seven years, lawyers have been arguing the case in the local courts.

Ackland willed before his death at the age of 84 here in 1940 that the bulk of his estate go to a Southern university to promote art in the South. But, he stated, the college that received the money would have to inter his body, his writings, and his paintings in an elaborate mausoleum-museum on the campus.

Ackland made four wills during the years he lived alone in cheap hotels here. In them he named various colleges. His first choice was Duke University, but it declined the gift. It was then that various relatives of Ackland unsuccessfully attempted to contest the will.

Finally, Justice Alexander Holtzoff was called on to decide between the University of North Carolina and Rollins College at Winter Park, Fla.

Attorneys Homer Cummings and J. Edward Burroughs, jr., argued that Rollins had shown the greater interest in art ever since its founding in 1885. Lawyers for N. C. U. said that school is larger and is closer to Duke.

Justice Holtzoff said giving the money to Rollins seemed more in accord with Ackland's wishes.

This School's Graduates Major in U. S.

The commencement was unlike any other held in the city.

Graduates, whose ages ranged from 12 to 65, vigorously sang The Star Spangled Banner," and the Battle Hymn of the Republic. The hour-long program ran exactly on schedule.

After the program graduates and spectators were invited to an adjoining room for "a little bit to eat and much conversation."

It was the graduation exercise of day English classes at the Webster Americanization School, 10th and H sts. nw.

Forty-five students from 28 countries received diplomas and 12 students from four countries certificates. Six of the graduates who were war brides took part in the program. Ruth Greger Steven of Germany presided; Zakorka Martin of Belgrade sang "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia" and a Yugoslavian folk song; Lucienne Schor of France, Margaret Holzman of Germany and Ann Klein of Hungary demonstrated their English with short speeches, and Ika Van der Gracht of Belgium sang folk songs in five languages.

Principal speaker was Souren H. Hannessian, former graduate of the school and now first vice president of the Americanization School Association.

"There is no limit in education and economic advancement in this country," he said. "You don't have to pay for your education. It is something you don't get anywhere else."

The graduates applauded and nodded their heads in approval.

Tenants Deny Rent Petition Is Justified

Residents of fashionable Westchester Apartments, 4000 Cathedral ave. nw., yesterday continued their protests against Realest Corporation's petition for a 17½ per cent rent boost.

The hearing is before Rent Control Examiner Ernest F. Williams at the District Rent Control Administration, 1740 Massachusetts ave. nw. It will go into its fourth day at 3:30 this morning.

Tenants stated that there has been a constant reduction of services during the past five years and that repairs have often been made at their own expense.

Recent changes in landscaping were described by Westchester residents as "cemetery stuff," which made the grounds look like a "glorified parking lot." They requested that further improvements be made within the individual apartments rather than on the grounds and lobbies, where they act as a "show window."

Ernest F. Henry, attorney for the owners, protested that one tenant whose rent had not been increased since 1934 was now paying "depression rent."

Two earlier attempts by attorneys representing the tenants to discuss the request for rent adjustment were denied

Most of Alexandria's taxi companies expected to be operating at full force again today after changing insurance from the temporarily suspended Keystone Co., which had insured most of the city's cabs.

House Refuses Funds To Plan Slum Program

Senate Approves Member for Agency Barred From Action

Washington slum-clearance plans rode a congressional merry-go-round yesterday, with these developments:

The House, with no word of protest, agreed with its Appropriations Committee to give not a cent of the $95,000 needed for the legal first step of planning the 20-million-dollar, 10-year slum clearance and redevelopment program authorized by Congress last year.

The Senate approved without discussion the nomination of Charles A. Robinson, retired C. & P. Telephone Co. vice president, to be a member of the five-man District Redevelopment Land Agency, set up to handle the slum-clearance program.

The agency, headed by Mark Lansburgh, is barred from action until plans, for which the House denied funds, are drafted and cleared with the District Commissioners.

The slum clearance planning money was for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The slum-clearance law gave the commission the first chore in slum clearance—preparing a master plan and detailed plans for redeveloping specific areas.

Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) plans to ask the Senate to grant the money. He was author of the slum-clearance bill and is a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

While dropping the slum funds, the House approved in the Independent Offices money bill these major items for the Washington area:

1. A $1,700,000 fund for site and plans of the proposed 22-million-dollar Washington hospital center, in which the present Emergency, Garfield and Episcopal Hospitals are to be combined.

2. An $850,000 start toward the $7,500,000 National Institute of Mental Health at Bethesda, Md.

3. A $200,000 fund for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to buy land in Maryland for extension of the George Washington Memorial Parkway to Great Falls. The agency now has about 75 per cent of the Maryland land needed, and with the new money would boost its holdings to 90 per cent.

Action Expected Today On Teacher-Pay Bill

Senate action on the Washington teacher-pay-increase bill is expected today, Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) said yesterday.

Cain said he had cleared with Senate leaders to bring the pay bill to a vote. He said there was only a slim chance of getting time today for the 14-million-dollar city revenue bill.

With the pay bill, a sharp fight is expected on how to treat 196 teachers now rated as "superior" and getting higher pay for the rating.

For Grand Jury

Son's Wife Is Held in Trego Death

A 35-year-old housewife here was yesterday ordered held for action of the grand jury in the death of her 74-year-old mother-in-law, allegedly dragged from bed, choked and badly beaten.

A coroner's jury took the action against Mrs. Erma Trego of 2235 Prout st. se., after a detective and relatives testified to the victim's death-bed version of injuries sustained April 20 at the Prout st. home. Mrs. Trego was later released under $2000 bond.

The victim, Mrs. Annie Trego of the same address, died June 9 in Gallinger Hospital of blood poisoning. She had been admitted to the hospital after the alleged beating, suffering a broken leg and a dislocated hip.

Detective Sergt. George W. Cook arrested the daughter-in-law after the inquest and charged her with murder. If she is indicted, the degree of crime will be determined by the grand jury.

Sergeant Cook testified before the coroner's jury at District Morgue yesterday that the dying woman told him she was dragged from her bed, choked and beaten by her daughter-in-law after her son left home following a fight with his wife.

The deceased woman's son, Raymond L. Trego, 41, clerk with the Treasury Department, took the witness stand voluntarily to testify to his domestic troubles. He said when he returned several hours after leaving his wife he found his mother on the bedroom floor.

She told him, he testified, that his wife had beaten her up in his absence. The two, he said, "hated each other" and quarreled constantly.

Insanity Plea Indicated in Murder Trial

Attorney Stresses Carpenter's Distress And Jobless State

A plea that Floyd P. Wilson, 32-year-old Riverdale carpenter was driven temporarily insane by joblessness and mounting debts, at the time of the holdup-slaying of Milton E. Lowe, may be made by Defense Attorney Charles E. Ford.

This was indicated yesterday in Ford's opening remarks to a District Court jury.

Wilson is on trial for his life on a charge of first degree murder, committed during perpetration of a felony.

A move by Ford to enter a plea of guilty to second degree murder (penalty 20 years to life) was rejected by Associate Justice Alexander Holtzoff after the prosecution refused to agree to the shift.

Death sentence is mandatory in the District upon conviction of murder in the first degree. A guilty plea may not be made on a charge of this nature under District law.

Wilson is accused of killing Lowe with a .32-caliber revolver as the latter left the Giant Food Market, 3924 Minnesota ave. ne., shortly after 9 p. m., February 8, carrying $10,000—the day's store receipts.

In his remarks before the jury of nine men and three women, Ford portrayed the defendant, the father of five children, as a "family man distressed and overwrought" by joblessness and mounting debts.

Prosecutor Cecil Heflin, in his remarks, declared Wilson pretended to be interested in a store concession, to get a better idea of the store's operation, with a view to robbery.

Testimony of Government witnesses yesterday was of a routine nature.

The witnesses included Dr. Richard Rosenberg, deputy coroner; Pauline Hess, Giant Food Stores cashier; Detective Sergt. Otto Fuss, robbery squad, and Ellen M. Amos, 6508 C st. ne., a Giant employe.

Others who testified included Howard L. Pilling, police photographer; Jean J. Vivino, Gallinger Hospital nurse; Wallace E. Moore, 3536 Clay st. ne., Giant Food Stores employe; Ruth Yesbeck, sister-in-law of the slain man; Joseph E. Small, morgue attendant; Detective Edward C. Cissell, Prince Georges police.

Those on the jury are: Roderick T. Bell, 32, 1923 D st. ne., Naval Gun Factory employe; Mrs. Carrie A. Cox, 59, 700 13th st. se., Bureau of Engraving employe; Frank Dean, 59, 1417 N st. nw., salesman; Mrs. Emma H. Dodd, 60, 208 Massachusetts ave. ne., Government Printing Office employe; Charles Reckeweg, 53, 5424 Sherrier pl. nw., pressman; Joseph E. Duvall, 33, 4832 Reservoir rd. nw., optical company manager; Christopher C. Foley, 49, 3200 16th st. nw. auditor; Cecil A. Gordon, 36, 3206 5th st. se., electrician; Marion G. Harding, 36, 3252 N st. nw.; Arthur J. McManus, 56, 1701 Lang pl. ne., cab dispatcher; Thomas Perone, 57, 3705 18th st. ne., steam engineer; Mrs. Isabel M. Pollock, 52, 1365 Kennedy st. nw., clerk.

The trial will be continued today starting at 10 a.m. Heflin said he expected to rest the Government's case this afternoon.

Some to Find Tax Headache Is Twofold

Taxpayers in several Montgomery County communities will have a double tax headache when July 1 rolls around.

On that date they will have to start paying 38 cents more than the old county tax rate of $1.50 for every $100 assessed property valuation. And in addition, they will have to meet special community levies recently authorized.

Takoma Park residents, for instance, will not only have to pay the county's new tax rate of $1.88, but in addition the town tax of $1.20. This, with the library and fire taxes, brings the total to $3.44, officials said.

North Chevy Chase residents will pay an additional 10 cents for municipal services, a 2-cent hike in Sanitary Commission taxes, and a 3-cent increase in the fire area tax, bringing the total to $2.87.

Some 100,000 residents of suburban Montgomery County will also pay higher taxes requested by the municipalities and approved by the county commissioners.

Vienna Boy, 8, Tick Victim, In Good Condition

An 8-year-old Vienna, Va., boy suffering with Rocky Mountain spotted fever was reported in "good" condition at Children's Hospital last night.

At the same time a 48-year-old Manassas, Va., farmer was said to be in "very poor" condition at Freedmen's Hospital with what appeared to be the same disease. Dr. Charles Ireland said final diagnosis must await the result of tests.

A hospital doctor said that 20 or 30 ticks were removed from the Fairfax County boy. It was the county's second case within a week.

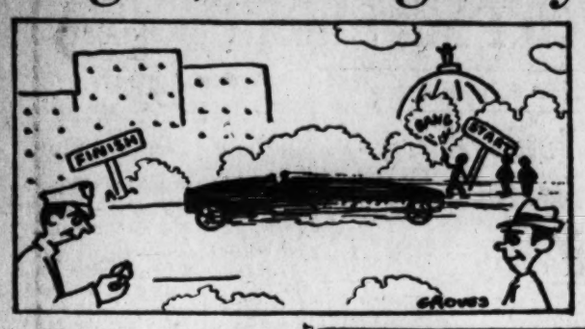
Autoist to Show Right, Wrong Way



What every motorist has eyed and many have tried will finally be scrutinized—just for the record.

It all has to do with the question of whether a driver can make better time by breaking traffic regulations or by obeying them to the letter. And tomorrow, Cannonball Baker, who knows a few things about all kinds of driving, will try for the $64 question with the aid and abetment of District traffic officials.

Both Traffic Director George E. Keneipp and Inspector Arthur E. Miller of the Police Department expressed opinions that Cannonball wouldn't save much time by doing it the wrong way. The traffic light timing won't permit it, they said.

Promptly at 10 a. m., Cannonball will leave Porter and Connecticut aves. and drive to 1st st. and Constitution ave., carefully observing stop signs, traffic signals, and all of the safe driving amenities. He will then return and proceed again over the route. But this time, accompanied by a motor cycle escort, he will attempt to weave in and out of traffic, jump the signals and coast through stop signs. Both trips will be carefully timed.

The veteran driver will come to Washington with the black and canary Nash sedan that was the pace car for the 500-mile race at Indianapolis on Memorial Day. He is on a tour of Eastern cities to show how safely and economically an auto can be driven.

Firemen 'Housebreakers'

Fire Truck Company No. 4 responded yesterday afternoon to a frantic mother's call for help at 18 Rhode Island ave. nw. Her second-floor apartment door, she said, had blown shut on her while she was outside without her key. Firemen put a ladder to a second-floor bedroom, climbed through the open window and tiptoed to admit the mother, Mrs. Loraine Brown. They didn't even awaken the cause of her anxiety, her sleeping 3-month-old son, Billy.

Dealer Has Busy Wife

Anthony J. Seidl, 1402 14th st. nw., yesterday told the Alcoholic Beveral Control Board his books and records were inadequate because his wife was "too busy" to keep them up to date.

Seidl, holder of a class 'C' liquor sale license, appeared before the ABC on five violation counts, including: inadequate books and records, no manager approved by ABC, failure to inform ABC of new employes, failure to fingerprint them, and failure to have storeroom keys available for inspectors. The ABC Board took the case under advisement.

Man Badly Beaten

A well-dressed 60-year-old man, identified by cards in his pockets as H. S. Eustace of Culverton, Va., was in critical condition last night in Gallinger Hospital. In semilucid moments he told police he was beaten here Tuesday by a band of young thugs.

The victim was found unconscious on the sidewalk in front of 1519 9th st. nw. at 9:15 p. m. Tuesday. He was taken to the hospital, suffering concussion, a broken jaw and laceration over the left eye. Police said the man had not been robbed.

Sues Over Fall

A fall from a scaffold which was said to have resulted in a fractured skull was the basis for a $50,000 damage suit filed in District Court yesterday.

The plaintiff, William J. White, a painter of 616 Good Hope rd. se., alleged in the suit against the Mandell Chevrolet Co., Inc., 13th st. and Good Hope rd. se., that the scaffolding for a paint job at the auto concern was provided by the auto company.

He mounted the scaffold last January 25, the suit asserts, a rope gave way, and White was injured. Attorney J. E. Bindeman, representing White, asserted there was an implied warranty that the scaffold would be securely tied.

Vend and Learn

Daniel McShane, 48, ice cream vendor, will probably stay home Sundays and use both hands in his business hereafter.

McShane, who holds a District vending license, but who does not possess a special one required for vending in a public park, was arrested Sunday as he sold his wares from a boat alongside the seawall at the Tidal Basin. He was leaning with one arm on the seawall—which is park property.

Municipal Court Judge Aubrey Fennell freed McShane on personal bond on the park vending charge. Then the salesman was taken before Judge Nadine Gallagher and fined $5 for vending on Sunday.

Man Held in Attack

A 33-year-old Brentwood man was arrested yesterday by police there in the attempted rape of a 23-year-old Hyattsville woman June 9. Louis E. Hackey, 3710 Webster st., a dishwasher, was seen loitering on 38th st. around 1 a. m. by Police Chief Carl G. Schatz, who recognized him from the woman's description. Hackey is alleged to have followed the woman five blocks from the Mount Rainier streetcar terminal and to have attempted to attack her on the Brentwood School grounds. Her screams attracted several persons and he fled. He was held in Hyattsville Jail for a hearing July 7.

Escape 'Legalized'

A man who once slipped out of the Arlington Jail was spared a return trip yesterday.

Judge Hugh Reid of Arlington County Court decided that Preston D. Spillman, 19, who escaped from the jail in 1945 after being charged with assault, was a free man. According to Judge Reid's ruling, Spillman, whose last known address was 589 Columbia rd. nw., Washington, was not a fugitive after his escape. A grand jury had failed to return an indictment against him, Judge Reid said.

Connors Obtains Bond

Raymond Connors, 34, who was acquitted of the trailer-camp murder here last year, was released yesterday in $1500 bond after spending the night in District Jail.

Connors, who resides in New York City, was jailed when his bondsman turned him over to District Court after Connors had failed to make an earlier court appearance, claiming illness.

Connors obtained William J. O'Neil as bondsman before noon yesterday. He is to appear here June 30 on a perjury charge resulting from testimony in the murder trial, and on a stolen car indictment.

Way Opened For 1500-Unit Apartment

The way was opened for construction of a 1500-unit apartment development next to the Prince Georges Golf and Country Club yesterday when a 100-acre tract of land was rezoned.

The Prince Georges County board of commissioners, sitting as a district council in Hyattsville, granted a residential C classification to Eugene B. Roberts, owner and prospective developer of the tract, over objections in principle by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The apartment, to cost between 10 and 12 million dollars, will face on Landover rd. and will extend from the golf entrance to Sheriff ave.

Roberts plans also to construct a million dollar shopping center on a 14-acre tract. In the center of the commercial group will be a 6-acre park in which he may build a public swimming pool. Facilities for parking 700 cars will be included.

Other nearby rezonings approved included: Commercial, 14 lots on Tuxedo rd. near the Cheverly entrance asked by four applicants; one lot at 4209 Crittenden st., Hyattsville; two adjoining lots in the 3900 block of Rhode Island ave., Brentwood, by separate individuals; one lot in the 6100 block of Baltimore ave., Riverdale, and a tract on New Hampshire ave. near the District line, industrial, 40,000 square feet fronting on 46th ave., opposite Anderson st., Edmonston; and two-family residential, six lots in the 4900 block of L st., Hillside, and one lot at 3708 Tilden st., Hyattsville.

856 Give Pepco Refunds

It was a cloudy day yesterday, but there was a silver lining in the form of 856 more Washingtonians mailing in agreements to send refunds on their electric bills to the $1,300,000 campaign goal for Children's Hospital.

Some 3000 consumers have now authorized contributions of PEPCO refunds to the hospital, which is still about $80,000 short of its building fund goal.

The refunds represent returns on electric bills ordered by the Public Utilities Commission for 1944-45-46, after the Potomac Electric Power Co. was ordered to cut rates to residential consumers.

Japanese Beetles Back

Japanese beetles, which last year caused an estimated $250,000 damage in Montgomery County, are here again this year, County Agent O. W. Anderson reported yesterday.

Calls have been coming into his office since Sunday, Anderson said, with reports that the pests have been sighted in various areas. Usually, the county agent said, they arrive in force anywhere from a week to 10 days in the suburban area before they do in the rural areas.

Pilgrimage Ends

4-H Youths Recall Camp Highlights

Boys and girls from rural America relived the highlights of their week-long pilgrimage to Washington before the seventeenth National 4-H Club encampment ended last night.

In the medium of a make-believe television broadcast from "Station HHHH" in the Arlington Farms Recreation Building, slide pictures were used to recall Washington scenes. The campers supplemented the pictures with their impressions of the Nation's Capital.

"I think it is a symbol of purity," one farm boy remarked about the White House.

On his visit to the House of Representatives and Senate, another chap observed that "in most countries rural men are not allowed to see their laws being made and meet the men who make them."

"A 4-H girl was astonished by the "simplicity and dignity of the Washington Monument," and a Midwesterner remarked about his visit to the Lee Mansion:

"I was impressed by the quality and dignity of the house and surprised that the slave quarters were better than I was inclined to believe they would be on a Southern plantation."

Last night's program closed with the traditional 4-H Club candlelighting ceremony which symbolizes the virtues of "citizenship in democracy."

Montgomery Democrats Answer GOP

Republican charges that Democrats in Montgomery County are responsible for inadequate teacher salaries were labeled yesterday by Democrats as "just another smoke screen."

On Tuesday the Republican county commissioners described the Board of Education as "an adjunct to the Democratic Central Committee." In rejecting a Board of Education request for an additional $400,000 for 1947-48, the commissioners said:

"It is significant that the present Board of Education did not initiate and support a school budget last year or during previous years that would have remedied the school situation."

J. Bond Smith, publicity chairman for the Democratic Central Committee, yesterday said:

"The Republican County Commissioners' partisan attack on the Board of Education is just another smoke screen to divert public attention from the fact that they are raising the basic county tax rate 38 cents.

"And this at a time when the Democratic State Legislature has just presented them approximately $1,500,000 additional revenue for . . . the school system."

Pointing to the commissioners' statement that they have no control over disbursements of the appropriations made for teachers' salaries, Smith said "this fact is most fortunate both for the teachers and the students."

Smith cited educational qualifications of present Board of Education members and pointed to the present "excellent" school system.

Fairfax Area Plans to Set Up Sanitary Unit

Plans to set up a sanitary district within a sanitary district got under way yesterday at the semi-monthly meeting of the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors.

A delegation of Groveton, Penn Daw, and New Alexandria residents told the board of bad sewage conditions in their communities and stated their desire to set up a sanitary district of their own.

The board authorized G. Hubard Massey, county consulting engineer, to survey the area desiring to be included. He said that he would meet with a committee from the communities Monday to define the boundaries.

A petition from residents of the area together with results of the survey must ultimately be presented to the County Circuit Court for approval.

The communities lie within the county's sanitary district No. 1, but Massey said they are not serviced by the Federal sewage system installed in the district several years ago.

At present each house in the area must provide its own well and septic tank. Residents said that the soil will not absorb the moisture and that sewage is often forced above the ground level.

The board also approved nine applications to rezone property in different parts of the county from residential to business classification.

Peace Group At Gala Fete Defies Rain

By Genevieve Reynolds

LEADEN skies and intermittent rain yesterday failed to dampen the spirits of some 300 persons, who gathered at the gala benefit party given by the Women's Action Committee for Lasting Peace.

Mrs. Martin Vogel, an expert at successful party throwing, loaned her spacious house at 2601 30th st. for the occasion. Originally planned as a garden fete, everything moved indoors with the advent of showers.

Engagement Rumored

In the milling crowd we heard that chic Gisele B. Guirola Chautemps, daughter of the Camille Chautemps, will announce her engagement to a Dr. Perry from Virginia. The official announcement is scheduled for two weeks hence.

This will be Gisele's second marriage. Back in 1942 she married Edouard Guirola, a Salvadorian by birth, after a whirlwind romance that began on shipboard. It ended a few years later in divorce.

The bride-to-be is the daughter of Camille Chautemps, who was four times Prime Minister of France. The Chautemps family has been living in Chevy Chase, and are popular, familiar figures in Capital society.

Varied Program

Music, ballet and fortunetelling featured the party. Zina Onzarove, well-known teacher of classical ballet, whirled and pirouetted in several of her own interpretative numbers, responding with encores to the applause. The ballerina, who directed her own ballet company in Europe, has appeared with the opera, the Champs Elysees Theater in Paris, and in New York. Her accompanist was John B. Carroll, who contributed several solos.

Cynosure of all eyes was 11-year-old Bobbie Goodfeller, national champion baton twirler. His scarlet-coated jacket was bedecked with medals. He has 30 in all.

Asked if he intended to pursue baton twirling as a career, he said, "Yes, if I can learn to do it on ice skates."

Representative William Jennings Bryan Dorn of South Carolina, who served as master of ceremonies, called upon the women to continue to cooperate in working as diligently for a conclusive peace as they did to help win the war.

Two of the most popular spots were the fortune telling booths, where Mrs. Ellis M. Clement and Mrs. James L. Dixon, predicted futures. After taking a turn at the punch bowl, Mrs. Fred Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice, was one of many who had her palm and cards read by Mrs. Dixon.

Dispensing punch were Mrs. Harold Burton, wife of the Supreme Court Justice; Mrs. John Steelman, wife of the presidential adviser; Mrs. Chester Nimitz, Mrs. Carl Spaatz, Mrs. Ellen Woodward, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mrs. Carl Hatch, Mrs. Wiley Rutledge, wife of Justice Rutledge, and Mrs. Lorton Sims, chairman of hostesses.

Mrs. Charles C. Adams of Washington is at the Hotel Weylin, New York City, for a two-week visit.

Miss Bertha Noyes (left), one of Washington's well known artists, was among the guests at the tea yesterday at the New Zealand Legation for members of the English Speaking Union. Hosts were the New Zealand Minister and Lady Berendsen.

On the Society Front

Berendsens Entertain English Union

By Marie McNair

The strawberry shortcake and whipped cream disappeared as if by magic. So did platters of sandwiches filled with "toheroa," a delicate shell fish found on the beaches of New Zealand. Voices reached a crescendo pitch around the tea table and flowered and feathered hats bobbed everywhere.

It was the New Zealand Minister and Lady Berendsen's tea for members of the English Speaking Union—an organization devoted to the preservation of the ties which bind the peoples who speak a common tongue.

The rain had freshened the tree-hedged garden, but it also forced the hosts early in the day to give up thoughts of having their party out of doors. Instead Sir Carl and Lady Berendsen welcomed their guests in the drawing room, which opens onto the terrace and the lawn beyond. Lady Berendsen, like many of her guests, wore a print frock—gay flowers scattered on a black ground.

Former Representative Charles Dewey is the new president of the Washington branch of the English Speaking Union, but he and Mrs. Dewey weren't there yesterday, as they are visiting their chateau in France. A former president, Walter Tuckerman, and Mrs. Tuckerman were in the gathering, and others from Washington's "old guard" were Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, Miss Eloise Sargent, Miss Lydia Loring, Mrs. Hamilton Wright, and Miss Bertha Noyes.

The Australian Ambassador and Mrs. Norman Makin were there and Hampson Gary, our one-time Minister to Egypt; Clarence Hewes, and Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint.

Others there were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Mrs. George Thorpe, Mrs. Philip Strong, wearing a black faille suit; Mrs. Paul M. Linebarger, Gen. Henry K. Rutherford and his daughter, Dorothy; and Robert Lincoln O'Brien, towering above the throng.

The Countess de Castellane wore a blue costume to match her eyes, and Mrs. Geneva Dunham was in gray crepe studded with nailheads, with a padre's hat of fashionable mustard yellow. Still others were Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mrs. Robert Love Taylor, Miss Mabel Turner, and Mrs. Edward B. Morgan.

Myrtle Lunsford Is Married

In St. Francis Xavier Rectory on June 10, Miss Myrtle Emily Lunsford, Seat Pleasant, Md., was married to George Bernard Rothenbuescher, jr., of Washington. The Rev. L. G. Troch performed the double-ring ceremony.

The bride, wearing a white gabardine suit with aqua accessories and carrying a prayer book covered with white carnations, was attended by Miss Barbara Baden, attired in an aqua gabardine suit with brown accessories. Charles Hooper was best man.

After a reception at the home of the bride's parents, the couple left on a trip to Ocean City, Md.

Your Questions on Homemaking

How can I remove bluing streaks from an eggshell damask tablecloth and also from white linens? I tried a laundry bleach but without success. F.C.C.

The bluing streaks should come out if washed with warm soapy water, rubbing thoroughly.

Perhaps you may be interested in this answer to V. J.'s question on shrinking wool. Two sewing teachers and the Sewing Center told me to shrink woolen yardage by rolling it in a sheet previously dipped in cold water (so that the sheet is wet but not dripping) until dry. I have found this method very satisfactory. Baby oil was spilled on a fiber and cotton rug and a tan cloth couch cover. How can I remove the stain? I discovered some of my jam made four years ago did not seal. It does not smell spoiled nor does it have mold on it, but it is dark about one-third of the way down from the top. Is it edible? A. G. L.

To remove the oil from the rug, dust the spot with corn meal or salt and let stand until it absorbs the grease and brush off. Or you might work into the rug a cleaning powder which has been moistened with carbon tetrachloride. Let it stand for 30 minutes and brush off.

The oil should come out of the sail cloth by washing with warm sudsy water.

The jam is dark because of the action of the air on the fruit. Just remove the darkened portion and the rest is edible.

Thanks for the wool shrinking suggestion!

We have a mahogany veneer drum table which has some white spots (probably from drinks or hot dishes). Can we refinish this table at home? If so, how? We have also a walnut veneer cabinet which we would like to refinish in a cherry stain. Will you please give us directions for this? What can be applied to the above-mentioned table to keep glasses and hot dishes from marking it? A. K.

Use varnish remover and then rub down your drum table with steel wool or sand paper until the surface is perfectly smooth. Apply a new-type varnish which has a synthetic resin base. Use a brush to apply it and let dry thoroughly. Sand lightly with the grain, using sandpaper wrapped around a wood block. Wipe clean with dry lintless rag. Repeat, applying 2 or 3 coats of varnish, drying thoroughly and sanding after each application. Finish by rubbing with rottenstone or powdered pumice and raw linseed oil. The harder and longer you rub, the lovelier the finish will be.

Could you tell me how to remove perspiration odor from an old navy blue suit? The material of the suit is wool serge with a silk lining. Airing and dry cleaning does not remove the odor. I have a light oak dinette set which has become dirty and darkish in color. What is the best way to clean it so it becomes light again? After it is cleaned, should I shellac it? Also, the finish of the table top has worn off from ironing on it. How can I refinish it? It looked shiny before, but now the area that was ironed on is dull. E. F.

To remove the perspiration odor, dampen the affected area with pepsin powder. Let stand 30 minutes and brush thoroughly.

Wash your furniture with a soft clean cloth wrung out of warm mild soapy water. Use only enough soap to make a froth, not a heavy suds or you will have to wash off the soap. Go over the furniture a small area at a time, polishing dry as you clean. After it is cleaned treat the surface with a good furniture polish or wax. You should not shellac it unless all of the finish has been removed first.

To refinish the table top follow this procedure: Remove all the old varnish or shellac with a paint and varnish remover. Sand the top with the grain until satiny smooth. Wipe off all dust with a soft lintless cloth.

To give it a surface resistant to heat, water and alcohol, use a new-type varnish which has a synthetic resin base. Apply 2 or 3 coats of this varnish, allow it to dry thoroughly and sand it lightly with the grain. Wipe clean with a lintless cloth after each sanding. Finish by rubbing with rottenstone or powdered pumice and raw linseed oil.

When you have a beautiful new finish on your table top, you will not want to iron on it and take a chance of ruining it.

Can a fur coat be stored without being sent to a furrier for storage? If so how should the coat be prepared, packed and where stored? E. W.

If you value your fur coat, there is only one absolutely safe place to store it—in the cold vaults of a firm especially equipped for such storage.

How can I get dirt streaks out of a light blue dress that cleaning and washing haven't removed? The material is rayon, I think. How can one remove nicotine stains from the fingers? K. M. D.

Since the dirt streaks haven't been moved by cleaning and washing, they seem to be there to stay. Why not dye it a darker color or remove all of the color, using a commercial color remover suitable for the material, and redye it a different color?

Rub cut lemons onto your fingers to remove the stain.

I have a new miniature brass lamp. How can I best keep it shiny? Will a lacquer do it and how is it applied? Is there a good, quick way of removing casein paint from a ceiling which was originally calcimined? In the last few weeks I've seen small worms (somewhat like silverfish but varying in color from a beige to a light brown) in my living room. What are they and how do I get rid of them? Are the various types of vaporizers which one hangs in a closet at all effective against moths if the closet is used frequently? F. L. N.

Apply a coat of clear lacquer to your lamp to keep it shiny. This lacquer may be purchased at a hardware or paint store and is applied with a small paint brush. Ask for water white transparent metal lacquer.

There seems to be no very easy way to remove casein paint from a calcimined ceiling. It must be scrubbed off with a solution of washing soda and warm water.

The worms you describe may be the larva of carpet beetles. To control them, spray insecticide, containing DDT, liberally along the edges of carpets near the baseboards and in cracks of the floor. Vacuum clean these places thoroughly and spray less accessible cracks.

The vaporizers you mention are effective only if placed in a closet and then the closet is tightly sealed so that no air may enter. They should not be depended upon for moth control in your closet if the closet is in constant use.

Colorful Setting for a Summer Table

By Peggy Preston

THE food you serve and the manner in which you serve it is as indicative of your personality as your choice of clothes.

This was the opinion voiced yesterday by Mrs. D. D. Gearhart, decorator, before members of Washington's Fashion Group, at the monthly meeting and luncheon at the Washington Hotel. "The discriminating woman knows the importance of a novel, effective table," said Mrs. Gearhart. "Artistic decorations, the employment of individual touches such as figurines, etc., can give the simplest meal an air of graciousness and charm."

Four table settings arranged by food and fashion editors of local newspapers were used to illustrate Mrs. Gearhart's talk. Entitled "Fashions in Summer Tables," the four represented baronial, barbecue, brunch and buffet settings, respectively. Each were set up to demonstrate easy, effective, colorful service, with or without servants.

Formal Setting

The baronial table featured clear English crystal candelabrum and centerpiece, formal silver and china, and a crisp, white organdy hand-embroidered cloth.

Dessert was part of the decorations on the buffet table where a huge lazy-suzan carried small saucers of strawberries — the whole centered with a large plate of sugar.

"I particularly like the rich, brown cloth for the brunch table," Mrs. Gearhart said. "It is earthy, informal and serviceable, yet quite beautiful and is an ideal background for bright-hued Italian pottery."

Sun, Sky Colors

Reflective of the colors of the sky and sun were the blue plaid cloth and bright copper accessories that were used on the barbecue table-setting. Blue glass, brown pottery and a centerpiece of fresh vegetables completed the appointments.

Miss Gertrude Prisley, president, presided at the luncheon, which was the final one of the season for the Fashion Group. Among guests at the head table were Mrs. Morris Cafritz, John Carradine, who is appearing in "Bill of Divorcement" at the Olney Theater, and Mrs. Carradine.

Mrs. Woodhouse Picks Flaws in Women's Clubs

While women's interests in public affairs are on the increase, feminine organizations are not as effective as they should be in this field. So declared Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse, executive director of the Women's Division, Democratic National Committee.

Guest speaker at Washington Zonta Club's luncheon yesterday in the Dodge Hotel, Mrs. Woodhouse said, "I think this lack of effectiveness is because women's clubs are afraid of being called political."

Getting down to brass tacks, the former Connecticut congresswoman, told how women join organizations, pass intelligent resolutions for participation in public affairs, then either fail to vote, or cast ballots for candidates who do not stand for what the club advocates.

Behind Bretton Woods

Mrs. Woodhouse gave credit to the General Federation of Women's Clubs and the National League of Women Voters for being primarily responsible in getting the American public to accept the Bretton Woods Agreements.

She said that generally business groups don't see the relationship between prosperity ir this country and peace in the world.

The speaker pointed out that when we put tariffs on wool and other commodities such as is now proposed in an impending congressional measure, people abroad will say, "What's the matter with the United States, and what's the use?"

"The result will be a revival of cut-throat economic warfare," explained Mrs. Woodhouse. "You can't have economic warfare long without shooting," she emphasized.

Should Get to Cause

She expressed the belief that women's organizations spend too much time patching up lives that never should have been broken in the first place. She cited juvenile delinquency as one example.

"Instead of so many welfare and relief drives," Mrs. Woodhouse said, "it would be far better to prevent the conditions that cause them."

For real effectiveness among women's groups, Mrs. Woodhouse proposed (a) greater interest in public affairs plus active participation at the community level first, and (b) registering and voting in all elections.

"Peace is worth the little trouble of taking an interest in public affairs," she concluded.

Special luncheon guest was Dress Designer Louise Armour. Miss Dorothy Girton, program chairman, introduced the speaker, and Mrs. Dorothy B. Scates, Zonta president, presided.

Mrs. John Henry Purdy is spending a few days at the Barclay in New York before opening her summer home at Southampton, Long Island.

Tests for Jelly

A little refreshing of the memory in regard to jelly tests might be in order now at the beginning of another preserving season. Jelly is done when a very little will form a single large drop and break quickly away when dropped from a spoon. Another test is to pour a small amount on a dish and place the dish directly on ice. If it jells, the jelly will harden.

Learn How to Apply It

Many women who use rouge would look far younger and better without it, and there are others to whom it would be becoming if applied correctly and inconspicuously. If rouge is becoming to you and brings out your individual type go to a good beauty parlor and learn how to apply it to best advantage. There is nothing attractive about a poorly rouged woman.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Three Young Matrons, Nicely Conventional, Ponder Problem of How to Compete With Brazen Flirt Who Has Crashed Their Circle

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We are three married women, college graduates, in the upper middle income bracket,—$8000 to $10,000 a year. Each of us has one child, and we are not "tied down" to housework nor are we dowdy in appearance. We have household help; also an adequate personal allowance for clothes and beauty care.

At the usual round of cocktail parties which are a characteristic feature of social life in our city we enjoy ourselves immensely, meeting new people and talking to them. We are considered intelligent and interesting conversationalists.

Our problem concerns our smaller, more intimate social circle. There are four couples of us who get together about once a month for a buffet supper or just cocktails and dancing. We had wonderful times together until last year, when the fourth couple joined our "threesome."

The fourth wife is our age, has one child, is pretty, gay and very extroverted and obviously a "man's woman,"—preferring men's company to women's. On entering a group she either ignores the women or greets them hastily and makes straight for the men—kissing and hugging them affectionately.

Husbands Laud Flirt's Gaiety

OUR husbands all think she is wonderful—so much fun, so gay and vivacious—and hold her up as a good example to us. She flirts with them openly, sitting on their laps and giggling at their most trite observations. We have never criticized her to our men, because, of course, they would only champion her; and until last week we had never discussed her among ourselves.

She seems never to have outgrown an adolescent level of behavior and her appearance is in keeping. She wears very short skirts, extremely high heels, lots of pancake make-up and a long "page boy" hair-do. Her bright-colored outfits are rather cheap in price and effect. Popularity with men seems to be her ambition in life.

She is neither a college girl nor much of a reader, but reasonably intelligent; in fact, rather brighter than the average high school graduate. Her attitudes and interests are frivolous—pretty new clothes and gay parties. Perhaps it is this very quality of youthful gaiety that appeals to our husbands, and perhaps we should try to emulate her.

Should Matrons Act Sexy, Too?

SINCE meeting her, our husbands have become dissatisfied with conversation as a pastime. They'd rather flirt. So instead of talking a lot, as before, we usually dance or sing; and while we three can dance and sing well enough, because we don't cuddle up when dancing or singing together, they frankly prefer this brazen flirt to us.

We are not prudish and have indulged in flirtatious repartee, but we draw the line there. We don't lack sex appeal or charm; many men have been attracted to us, have thought us charming, even though we hold ourselves somewhat in reserve,—chatting, dancing, but never "letting ourselves go" with men, as this girl does.

She isn't "after" any of our husbands; she is utterly devoted to her own. She is simply a fun-loving flirtatious girl, essentially friendly, thoughtless rather than rude in pleasing herself.

Now, should we follow her example—though we disapprove it—just to "hold our own" with our husbands? Or should we continue to sit back and watch her antics? In order to seem vivacious and gay, is it really necessary to be downright shallow and silly? To be "a lot of fun" must we act sexy and cheap? Is conversation—general and platonic—outmoded social pastime? T. W.

Gang Up; Turn Tables on Her

DEAR T. W.: If you three properly balanced wives were willing to make fools of yourselves for an evening in a good cause, you might teach your husbands and this life-of-the-party girl a lesson in "How Not to Behave."

Here's how: Plot together to spring a surprise when the foursome meets next at her house. Shop the town weeks in advance to rig yourselves out in party costumes either closely styled after hers, or equally extremist, floosy or daring—with hair-do and make-up en suite.

Keep your plan a state secret. If the Mister gasps, freezes, snorts, etc., when you're dressed to go, register innocent mystification. Either make like you've done your best to please him (mentioning no names) and pout at his ungallantry; or act as if you think you look about the same as usual and can't understand him.

Caricature Her, Tongue in Cheek

ARRIVED at the party, give females the brush-off and charge the males with glad cries, hugs and kisses—even if you have to tackle the lunks by force, against their will, football fashion more or less, in case they back off as if from nightmare apparitions. Give chase. Be brazen. Coo and cuddle, tweak their lapels, shove them on chairs, sit on their laps—you've seen the routine—and giggle frantically.

You'll probably be in genuine hysterics at this point anyway, due to the nervous strain of the ghastly proceedings. However, your moral support through the evening will be in the fact of common cause—a gallant uprising to sicken your husbands on that vulgarity they've been panting after in single package labeled "Forbidden Fruit."

Are you game? This is to be a tongue-in-cheek performance, of course,—no attempt to entice. And I daresay it would be a real favor to the fourth husband, if it chastens the others. He may wear a brave face, but deeply he suffers from his wife's burlesque house behavior at parties. M. H.

Fresh-Cut Flowers Needed for Color Film

Hollywood.—Filming a modern Technicolor picture like "Tycoon," starring John Wayne and Laraine Day, is 40 per cent more exacting than making one in black and white. Flowers must be of the right hue, and fresh cut for will quickly shows in color and color of all objects must be similarly closely checked to maintain realism.

Ormandy Can Remember Music, Not Words

Hollywood.—Eugene Ormandy, named conductor of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, has a phenomenal memory for music and never uses a score in conducting, but he couldn't memorize seven lines of dialogue when he appeared in RKO Radio's "Memory of Love." "If the dialogue were notes, not words, it would be easy," he said.

Price Simply Bad Man—and 'Web' Is Good

By Richard L. Coe

ONE OF THE HAPPIEST features of "The Web," at Keith's, is that the villain was not dropped on his head when a baby.

Ella Raines

Vincent Price is playing a chap who's downright bad, and no attempts whatever are made to explain how he got that way. It's an out-and-out melodrama and a good one, at that.

This absence of mental disease, shaggy psychiatrists and the meaning of dreams is downright refreshing in a season which has brought us all sorts of explanations of how evil folk get that way. Since every confirmed movie addict knows that Vincent Price is the embodiment of nastiness, the story simply weaves along at a smart clip to send Price to his just deserts.

Ella Raines is in it, too, and almond-eyed Ella is a beguiling performer to watch. She plays a crisp young lady inclined to keep her own counsel—one of the beguilingly unfeminine traits Hollywood melodramas so charmingly beatify.

$5000 Fall Guy

Ella plays Price's secretary, a 24-hour-a-day job, evidently, as Ella seems to live at the Price home as well as hold down the anteroom of his office. Precisely what business Price is in we aren't told, but he works hard at it to rich rewards.

Into this cozy setup crashes lawyer Edmond O'Brien. He seeks modest settlement for accident damage done by Price's car to a client's pushcart. So adept is O'Brien at breezing into the inner sanctum that Price offers him a job as personal bodyguard—at $5000 for two weeks' work. Who could turn down such an offer?

Smart-talking O'Brien, understandably attracted by money and Ella, takes the job. Within 24 hours he has killed a man in defense of his boss. His pal on the police force suggests there's something phony in the setup, that O'Brien has just let himself be the patsy. The murdered man had just done a five-year stretch for mulcting Price's firm of a million bucks, but because the million never has turned up the police are suspicious.

A Neat Compliment

Gradually O'Brien catches on to a few oddities himself, but in admitting it is forced to conclude he is a murderer. Then the evil Price, feeling that Ella must have told O'Brien too much, frames the two of them into a second murder.

You're in on the villainy all the way through, but both characters and action are swiftly and smartly enough conceived that you become engrossed in their adventure. How it works out becomes mildly important to you, and before you know it the picture's over. Which is as neat a compliment to a breezy melodrama as anyone can ask.

The dialogue, too, is refreshingly zippy with very few lines you can quote exactly in advance. The courtship of Ella is carried on in a ratty-tat-tat slickness, using such lines as "A lot of things can happen in a week. France fell in 18 days and you're not as tough as France." Not brilliant, you see, but far above the Western cliches we've had of late.

The cast is fine, the production well done and the yarn tightly woven. Yes, it's a pretty good melodrama and we've no reservations about recommending it.

G-Men's Trick Mirror Came From Marseille

New York, June 18.—The transparent mirror used by the G-Men was exposed in "The House on Ninety-second St." It's an ordinary-looking mirror. The person looking into it can see only his reflection. But from the other side it's transparent and observers stationed there can see everything in the room. . . . In many spy cases the action in the room was photographed by a movie camera operated from behind the transparent mirror. . . . J. Edgar Hoover was asked if his department had invented this crime-detecting device. "Frankly, no," Hoover confessed. "It originated in the bordellos of Marseilles."

J. Edgar Hoover

Babe Ruth was asked to donate some used baggage to the Salvation Army's campaign in behalf of camp-bound youngsters. Ruth added some bats and balls for children who aren't leaving the city. "So long as a boy has a bat and a ball," said Ruth, "he won't be too sad if he can't go away." An advertising agency has approached Bob Hannegan for a deal with the Postoffice Department. His project involves the use of advertising matter on the backs of postage stamps.

One of the New Orleans' Carnival clubs recently discovered that bats had taken up living quarters in the magnificent papier mache floats which were being stored until Mardi Gras. Experts were called in and the chemicals they applied were of no avail. The Carnival officials were reconciling themselves to having to parade through New Orleans' streets with bats roosting on the Carnival King's scepter. Then the Louisiana Department of Wild Life and Fisheries offered a suggestion—tin horns, dishpans and bells, because bats hate noise. The noise-makers were used, but they only made the bats restless. Finally a jukebox was installed—and the wind instruments of Harry James, Artie Shaw and Benny Goodman chased the bats.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Jim Farley Neglected Part of FDR Story

By Drew Pearson

There is one thing genial, big Jim Farley forgot to mention in his illuminating Collier's confessions on how he broke with Franklin Roosevelt — namely Mrs. Farley.

Mrs. Farley

Bess Farley is a subject dear to Jim's heart and one which he doesn't like to talk about where the Roosevelts are concerned. But to those who watched Jim during the years he was in the New Deal, it is inescapable that Bess played a major role in his gradual drift away from "The Boss."

Mrs. Farley hated Washington and never hesitated to say so. She also disliked the Roosevelts, and was almost as indiscreet in her remarks about them as she was about Washington.

She refused to live in the Nation's Capital, in fact was the only Cabinet wife who did not take her place here beside her husband. This forced Jim to be a commuter. At first he spent about five days a week in Washington, with two days in New York. Then he gradually drifted into spending about two days in Washington, sometimes less.

True, New York politics was important. Also Jim toured the country a great deal. But the job of running a giant organization such as the Postoffice Department, plus the Democratic National Committee, plus being an adviser to the President ordinarily requires seven-days-a week concentration.

And it frequently happened that when FDR called intimate conferences, Jim Farley just wasn't around. He was up in New York with his family.

More important than this, however, in the final Farley-Roosevelt break, was the constant poison which Mrs. Farley poured into Jim's heart, plus the fact that FDR couldn't help but know about this poison.

Once when the Farleys were walking down 5th ave. in New York, Bess pointed to a big, shiny black limousine.

"Look at that!" she said. "That's the kind of a car I would be riding in if you weren't working for that ingrate. Instead, I'm walking!"

Obviously, Jim couldn't maintain two establishments in New York and Washington on a Cabinet Officer's meager salary; and the more he went into debt, the more Bess Farley demanded that he leave Roosevelt. She kept harping home the idea that Jim had made Roosevelt, that if it hadn't been for Jim there wouldn't be any Roosevelt, and that it was time Jim got away and let Roosevelt collapse.

So, after a while, Jim Farley really got to believe that all this was true. That was one of the most important factors in the break between the two once great friends.

Note—Though Farley complained that he was not invited to the White House socially, the real fact was that Mrs. Farley was seldom in Washington. In addition, the Roosevelts knew all too well how Bess felt toward the President, and social gatherings under such circumstances don't flourish.

Report Decision

Today the House Administration Committee will decide whether it is sufficiently interested in opposing fascism to report to the full House of Representatives a recommendation to print a Library of Congress study of "Fascism in Action." So far the report has been blocked in committee.

Last year a report on "Communism in Action" was printed immediately. And, despite GOP economy talk, 48,000 copies were sent by GOP leaders to members of the Senate—and not at the Senators' request.

Inside Debate

Inside debate among the Truman Cabinet regarding the Taft-Hartley labor bill started out with only two members vigorously opposed to the bill—Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach and Secretary of the Interior Krug. It ended with most of them opposed.

One of the things that convinced them was a five-point memo circulated by Schwellenbach. Before he went to Canada, Truman had asked the Cabinet to give him the benefit of their individual views in writing, and the methodical Secretary of Labor did a masterful job.

Another convincing factor was the testimony of Paul Herzog, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, who in a small meeting of Cabinet and labor advisers last week, demonstrated how the Taft-Hartley bill could throw industries into labor-relations chaos.

At this meeting, the only adviser present who registered indirect approval of the bill was Secretary of Commerce Harriman, and he did so only by asking questions. He frankly admitted that he was under strong pressure from business interests to urge the President to sign the bill, though actually he seemed fairly neutral.

Why Veto?-

Here are some of the points raised by White House advisers in urging the President to veto:

1. A total of 55,000 new labor elections would be held next year under the labor bill, Schwellenbach based this point on the fact that any one worker in a plant could call for an election to determine whether the union represented a majority of the workers. Thus a handful of stooges inside a plant could call election after election, stopping work and creating industrial chaos.

2. The labor bill does not prevent strikes, merely postpones them. And Secretary Krug made the point that the bill would help John L. Lewis. If Lewis' miners walk out July 1, as expected, the Taft-Hartley bill calls for an 80-day cooling-off period, which would put the coal strike into the cool weather when Lewis always prefers a strike.

3. In regard to the threatened rail strike this summer, the Taft-Hartley bill specifically exempts the railroads.

4. If any Congressman's name is criticized at a union meeting, union officials are guilty of a felony.

5. Union newspapers would not be permitted to print the voting record of a Congressman.

6. No union can hire a radio commentator who discusses a Congressman up for reelection. In contrast, most big business firms, together with the National Association of Manufacturers, use radio programs freely, including political commentators. The National Association of Manufacturers and Republic Steel once paid $20,000 to George Sokolsky while he was writing a column for the newspapers.

7. The bill permits State labor laws to have priority over Federal laws. Schwellenbach claims this is unconstitutional.

Other objections registered by the Secretary of Labor were: The bill is so loosely drawn it would result in endless litigation, with only the lawyers benefitting; no effective machinery for arbitration; too much power given to the general counsel of the NLRB; takes the Conciliation Service away from the Labor Department.

Carradines Offer Drama Out at Olney

Mr. and Mrs. John Carradine have taken over the Olney stage in Clemence Dane's drama "A Bill of Divorcement" and if Carradine doesn't mind, we'd like to say his wife's a pretty good little actress.

Her name is Sonia Sorel and she's playing the part of his daughter, Sydney, a role Katharine Hepburn did very well by on the screen. Miss Sorel has a quiet, natural appeal and is a definite asset to the husband-wife acting team.

Carradine himself is a capable performer who can turn on the emotional spigot at will. As the man who's been divorced during his 19-year stay in an insane asylum, he's got a juicy role which he plays with confident zeal.

Ruth White, a member of Olney's permanent company, has her richest role to date, the unhappy first wife. She plays well and makes it a sharp contrast to her two earlier roles in "Dream Girl" and "The Male Animal."

The play itself, perhaps because the production itself and the lesser characters are on a pretty low level, struck us as being hopelessly dated on opening night. The direction is not good. Why, for instance, should the mother be seated on stage while her daughter has a highly critical scene with her fiancee and then ask: "What's happened?"

There are also some abysmally corny lines badly spoken. Tear jerkers have their place in summer theater right enough but they should be better handled than this. Still, the Carradines are fun to see.

Chinese See Red Drive as Only a Start

Peiping, June 18 (AP).—Chinese military leaders, despairing of a quick peace, predicted today the Communists' North China offensive is merely a prelude to a planned display of strength.

They described the current "battle of the railroads"—the Reds have cut several—as only the first step in an over-all Communist offensive. After sufficient confusion and economic uncertainty have been achieved, the military experts say, the Communists can be expected to unleash their strong Eighth Route Army and new Fourth Army of veterans.

In Nanking, the Kuomintang (government party) Central Political Council pigeon-holed a recent demand of the People's Political Council for peace.

The Communists, said a Kuomintang council member, are regarded as an international problem that "cannot be solved by the government as an internal issue."

The government is not underestimating the power of the Red push. A hitherto unhead of conscription program is taking youths from the best homes to become soldiers—always shunned formerly as the meanest of occupations. The conscription is causing unrest.

Peiping expects to spend seven billion yuan (nearly $600,000) to construct defenses.

Chien Tuang-cheng, National Peking University professor, told reporters the Chinese government should seek financial aid to relieve an almost certain famine—even if it "has to kowtow to Washington." He declared the war must be stopped immediately because of the economic crisis.

But there were further indications today that the government position in Manchuria was worsening and that the Communists were increasing their pressure toward Mukden.

Gen. Tu Li-ming, commander in Manchuria, offered government defenders 10 million yuan ($833) to redouble their efforts to hold Szepingkai, railroad center halfway between Mukden and Changchun, the capital.

UNRRA People Safe

Shanghai, June 18 (U.P.).—Sixteen UNRRA employes, including six Americans, who were feared to be in danger in the fighting zone near Tientsin, were reported safe today. They were identified as Donald Houk, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hurt, Mary Ditmanson, Richard Frasure and Mrs. E. Peterson.

Science Splits Atoms of 3 New Elements

Berkeley, Calif., June 18 (AP).—Atoms of three new elements have been split by American physicists but cannot be used in the development of atomic energy or bombs, Dr. Ernest O. Lawrence said today.

Lawrence, Nobel prize winner and inventor of the atom-smashing cyclotron, said atomic fission had been achieved with lead, bismuth and thalium—elements much lighter than hitherto used to release atomic energy, basic energy of the universe.

"But the splitting of these atoms," Lawrence said, "at present is only of scientific interest. It will teach us something about the nucleus of the atom but is not of practical application in making atomic bombs."

Lawrence said a University of Washington professor was "misinformed" when he said the new discoveries made obsolete all present plans for controlling fissionable materials.

Fission of bismuth, lead and thalium was achieved in the world's largest cyclotron at the University of California.

"In order to get an atomic explosion you have to get a slow neutron reaction—a chain reaction," Lawrence said. "That's not the case here. This is simply a matter of pounding into them with high energy atomic particles, knocking them to pieces."

The discoveries boosted to seven the number of elements that now can be split by man. Uranium 235 and 233, thought to be the "heart" of the atomic bomb, plutonium and neptunium previously have proved fissionable.

Conspiracy Trial Delayed By 1857 Law

Arguments on a 90-year-old law yesterday prolonged the mass conspiracy trial of 16 members of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee in District Court.

A defense motion to exclude all testimony taken before a House committee, based on an 1857 act cited by Attorney O. John Rogge, used up the full day's court session.

A ruling was delayed by Justice Richmond B. Keech, who said he probably would rule today.

As court recessed for the day, Prosecutor Charles B. Murray said he would attempt to show today reasons why the House Un-American Activities Committee began its investigatoins of the Refugee Committee in 1945.

Terming it "highly inflammable evidence," Murray said the testimony would be offered as proof to the rights of the House committee to subpena records of the Refugee group.

Murray said he would question Representative John S. Wood (D., Ga.) as his first witness.

Representative John E. Rankin (D., Miss.), a member of the House committee, may be called on today as a witness for the defendants, Rogge indicated.

City Fathers Invited to Join Swimming Party

RAINY DAY BLUES

Regis C. O'Donnell says that the next time it rains he's going to invite the City Fathers to a swimming party. It's to be held on the corner where O'Donnell lives—Barnaby st. and Aberfoyle pl. nw.

When I protested that there was no swimming pool at that corner, O'Donnell replied with a glint in his eye:

"Oh, yes there is—when it rains."

It seems that some day Barnaby st. will no longer end at Aberfoyle; it will be extended through the park to join Oregon ave.

Against that happy day, the District has been dumping fill dirt in the park approach—and every time it rains, the dirt and mud wash down into Aberfoyle pl.

The sewers clog up, the slush washes over street and sidewalk alike, and stays there until Time (the great fixer-upper) straightens matters out again.

DANGER SPOT

One of Washington's busiest intersections is very inadequately equipped with pedestrian traffic controls.

At 14th and F sts. nw., half the pedestrians can't see described can be avoided by storing the bottles in a cool place. It's also a good idea to refrain from shaking the bottle before putting it in the refrigerator."

That sounds pretty convincing, but what about the experience of Leslie S. Jeffreys, of 2520 41st st. nw.?

And that happened last Saturday—on a comparatively cool day.

TOKEN REPORT

You District Liners may be interested to know how well you've done in the token collection campaign for Children's Hospital.

More than 6400 letters have poured into the hospital since the campaign started. These letters contained 27,891 tokens, and $619.12 in cash.

In all, just under $3000 has been raised for the hospital by this method; precisely, the amount is $2,943.37.

Pepco reports that some tokens are arriving there, enclosed with authorizations to turn refund checks over to the hospital.

And Capital Transit is still wondering where all the tokens came from—and where they're still coming from.

Originally, the transit company thought it would be called on to redeem 150,000 of the little metal disks. To date, 375,000 have already been cashed in—and the figure is expected to hit 400,000.

EXPLANATION

Bob Evans of 2222 I st. nw. explains why pop bottles sometimes explode. He writes:

"The carbon dioxide gas which is used becomes increasingly insoluble in water as the temperature rises.

"If the pop is stored in too warm a place, enough of the gas leaves the solution to raise the pressure above the bursting point of the bottle.

"Accidents like the one you described can be avoided by storing the bottles in a cool place. It's also a good idea to refrain from shaking the bottle before putting it in the refrigerator."

That sounds pretty convincing, but what about the experience of Leslie S. Jeffreys, of 2520 41st st. nw.?

Leslie was doing his marketing in one of those big self-serve groceries. As he put a couple of bottles of soda pop in his cart, one of the bottles exploded and cut his hand.

And that happened last Saturday—on a comparatively cool day.

WELCOME, PODNER

Charles Michaels of Alexandria, Va., wants to know whether we accept men in the Lizzy Stone League for the Abolition of Long Skirts.

What do I look like, Bub—a Camp Fire Girl?

the lights that should govern their progress.

If you circle the four corners in a counter-clockwise direction, you can see every light because you're walking alongside vehicular traffic, for which the signals are arranged.

But if you try it in a clockwise direction, the best you can do is wait for somebody else to start across, and then hope he knows what he's doing.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

The Bridge Deck

By Florence Osborn

Whether it is a duplicate game in Jackson Heights or a rubber-bridge game in Alaska, a seven or eight-card spade suit offers possibilities for excitement. At a four-spade contract Ernest Gruening, Governor of the Territory of Alaska, had the occasion to make a clever holdup and unblocking play on today's hand. George Harding Smith, jr., of New York, Mr. Gruening's brother-in-law, has this to say:

"Since the freakish distribution of South's hand suggests two spade losers, the hand looks down because the diamond opening lead removes North's only entry for a discard of the two losing hearts on the king, queen of clubs.

"However, declarer, after some study, saw he might make the hand, despite adverse spade holdings, provided West did not become suspicious. South let the jack of diamonds take the first trick, assuming that a diamond would be continued. West, unhesitatingly, led another diamond. On this, South discarded his blocking ace of clubs, then discarded his two losing hearts on North's king and queen of clubs. Governor Gruening made his four-spade contract, losing only a diamond and two spades.
